The premises have recently been entirely rebuilt, and are fully licensed. This hotel was originally established in the 17th century.

THE HUMMUMS HOTEL and "ROCKLEY'S" (Limited).—In addition to the ordinary hotel accommodation, there are three special features to be mentioned, all of them being sources of great profit—viz.:

1. "Rockley's" Bar, one of the best wine and spirit bars in London. Open daily from five a.m. until midnight, and doing a steady and very lucrative cash business all the year round.

2. A public Grill-room, facing Covent-garden Market, most popular with, and largely frequented by, salesmen and others connected with the market, also open at five a.m. Although it has only been in working order for a few months, it has proved a great success, the takings from the early morning breakfasts alone being very considerable.

3. The celebrated old cellars, so well adapted for maturing wines, and extending under the roadway surrounding the hotel. From their situation, extent, and excellence, these cellars are in themselves a very valuable property. [illegible]

PROSPECTUS.

This company is formed to acquire and develop the freehold property known as the Wolverine Silver Mine, situate in the New Silver Region in the district of Thunder Bay, province of Ontario, Dominion of Canada, containing 80 acres or thereabouts of valuable mineral land, lying three-quarters of a mile north of White Fish Lake and in the very heart of the extraordinarily rich silver-bearing district where to-day are working the celebrated Rabbit, Beaver, Porcupine, Badger, Queen, Silver Mountain, and other mines, the richness of whose products is now believed to be surpassing that of all other silver mines, even those of the rich Silver Region of Nevada.

The Wolverine adjoins the Queen Silver Mine, which is turning out ore at 120ft. from surface of a high grade, stated to be yielding up to as much as 4,000oz. of silver to the ton. The same fissure veins that yield this ore run through the Wolverine, and are known and proved mother lodes, and not mere stringers or branches.

A remarkable feature attending the silver veins of Ontario is their extraordinary well-defined bearing, combined with increased richness in depth, thereby rendering their development free from the uncertainties which affect mines in other districts.

It needs only to read the following reports and extracts from some of the most authoritative and eminent men of their profession, to judge what the prospects of this Company are.

Dr. A. R. C. Selwyn, C.M.G., LL.D., F.R.S., Director of the Canadian Geological Survey, referring to the new silver region in his official report of August 15, 1887, says: "I have no hesitation in expressing my conviction that the region is traversed by a great series of true fissure-veins of most promising appearance, and many of which will almost certainly prove of immense and permanent value. The features of the veins are especially well illustrated by the workings of the Beaver and Porcupine mines; but there seems no reason whatever why the numerous parallel veins, which occur under precisely similar conditions, but on which at present only small openings have been made, should not develop into mines as rich as those above named, and now being successfully worked."

Also, in referring to the rock formation of this district, he says: "The softness of the country rock, a flat-bedded black argillite, and the general well-defined walls of the veins, make the cost of extraction comparatively small."

After referring in most favourable terms to mines visited in this vicinity, the report concludes as follows: "In any case, sufficient is now known to warrant the assertion that this region presents the natural conditions for the development of an immensely valuable and extensive industry, awaiting only the application of well-directed energy and enterprise in order to secure results exceeding, perhaps, the most sanguine anticipations."

Mr. J. Gray, the well-known American civil and mining engineer, in a recent report on the new silver region, says: "The Port Arthur or Thunder Bay section has developed more than double the wealth in the shortest time, and for the least outlay of any silver region in the world. This is not assertion, it is history and accomplished fact. It is to-day the richest known silver region on this continent. A remarkable feature attends the silver deposits of this north shore of Lake Superior, viz., the tendency in most cases to metallic and massive form."

The following extract, taken from the last Government Annual Report on Mines, 1886-7, referring to the new silver region near Port Arthur, says: "It is the most favoured and promising silver region now known. Timber is abundant and cheap for all purposes, and water never failing."

Mr. Charles F. Eschweiler, the eminent mining engineer of Milwaukee, of forty years' experience, referring also to the new silver region, says: "I was a sceptic of your mineral resources when I put foot in Port Arthur; I am now a strong believer in the country, strong in the faith that you are surrounded by one of the most promising mining fields on the face of the earth. The richness of the mineral veins are not sufficiently known among the mining men of America and Europe, or they would soon be worked on a large scale."

Extracts from the report of Mr. F. J. S. Williams, Mining Superintendent to the now famous Beaver Mine, and dated 27th Aug., 1888:

"I find the Wolverine Mine is situate immediately east of the Queen Mine, on the north shore of White Fish Lake, and distant from it less than one mile.

"It is located on the general run of the highly mineralised belt, and carrying the silver ores of this district.

"The location contains nearly 80 acres, and is traversed by two strongly defined veins. The principal lode I particularly examined. Its bearing or strike is about north 37° east (magnetic), with a dip of 15° to the south.

"The country or wall-rock at the point where the shaft is sunk to the depth of 36ft., and where I had a good opportunity of examining it, is an surface grey quartzite, as on the hanging wall, to the depth of 17ft., where it changes to the black slate of this silver region.

"The vein at surface measures 6ft. 6in. wide, carrying a small band or 'horse' of slate in its centre to the depth of 10ft., where the two parts of the vein unite, and form a compact vein of 3ft. 6in., which continues to widen to bottom of shaft, where it is again 4ft. 6in. wide, and composed of quartz, calcite, and fluor-spar carrying native silver, argentiferous galena, pyrites, black or glance silver, and zinc blende, the latter of which in this district invariably carries considerable silver. [illegible]

"The facilities for developing the location are very favourable indeed.

"In conclusion I can add that I have no hesitation in expressing the opinion that this Wolverine property presents a most excellent prospect of developing into a very first-class mine when properly opened out."

Mr. Henry De Q. Sewell, Assoc. Mem. Inst. Civil Engineers, and Dominion and Provincial Land Surveyor, of Port Arthur, has made an exhaustive report on the Wolverine Silver Mine, bearing date of 27th June, 1888, and from which the following extracts are taken:

"It is advantageously situated on the north shore of White Fish Lake, about 2,125ft. above and a little less than three quarters of a mile from the shore.

"The located line of the Port Arthur, Duluth, and Western Railway, which it is expected will shortly be built, being now under construction, passes through the location.

"The Wolverine is well wooded with timber suitable for building and mining purposes, while its great height above the lake affords facilities for economical mining not often met with.

"The Queen Silver Mining Company, whose property adjoins the Wolverine, are now constructing a wagon road to White Fish Lake, which will equally serve this property.

"The Wolverine location is about 80 acres in area, and contains two large and well-defined veins of great promise.

"The most northerly vein was, at the time of making the survey of the location, excavated to a depth of some 7ft. or 8ft. It is composed of good calcite spar, with a little quartz carrying native silver, argentiferous galena, and zinc blende, at that depth the vein is 6ft. 6in. in width, widening considerably as it goes down. It is very compact and well defined, and has good walls of the black silver-bearing slate peculiar to this district.

"The southern vein is very similar in every respect.

"About 660ft. from the western boundary of this location, at the junction of these two veins, is the principal shaft of the Queen Silver Mine.

"From the rich silver specimens I have taken out of the Wolverine northern vein, and the general aspect of both, I have no doubt but that the 'Wolverine' is equally as rich as the 'Queen,' and I consider it a very valuable property."

Extracts from Report by Capt. Thos. Roberts, of the Caradon Silver Mine:

"I have made a complete examination of the Wolverine Silver Mining Property.

"During my inspection I was accompanied by Mr. Wm. Broomfield, M.E., late of the Beaver Mountain Silver Mine.

"The Wolverine is immediately east of the Queen Silver Mine, as marked on the Government map, and contains 80 acres, more or less.

"There are two fissure-veins on the property having a south-westerly and north-easterly strike, and several test pits have been made along their course. I broke various samples of quartz, and fragments of the gangue from different points of these, nearly all of which showed black and native silver with blende and galena.

"The outcrop of the veins is similar to that of the adjoining property, the Queen, which is already yielding ore of from 3,000oz. to 4,000oz. of silver to the ton, and similar in appearance to that of the Badger, Beaver, Rabbit, Porcupine, and Silver Mountain Mines.

"I consider the Wolverine will prove as rich in depth as its neighbour, the Queen, adjoining.

"The foot and hanging walls of both lodes are of black slate, so congenial to silver in this district.

"I am further of opinion that as the mine is developed the veins will yield an increase in silver as depth is attained, this being the case in all the famous silver mines in this new silver region, where the indications were identical."

Referring to the above report Mr. Wm. Broomfield, M.E., of Port Arthur, says: "I have read Capt. Thos. Roberts' report on the Wolverine Silver Mine, and having been with him on the occasion of his visit of inspection I have no hesitation in saying that I fully concur with and corroborate his statements therein."

Another important report, dated 30th July, 1888, made by Mr. Walpole Roland, Civil and Mining Engineer, of Port Arthur, and whose sworn testimony has recently been solicited by the Canadian Government, after an inspection of the whole of the new silver region, appears on the slip attached to the prospectus.

CERTIFICATE OF ASSAY.

"I certify that the sample of ore deposited by Walpole Roland, Esq., Civil and Mining Engineer, described as coming from the 'Wolverine Lode,' and consisting of calc spar and argentiferous zinc blende, with argentite or black silver, and assayed by me, yielded as follows:

"511 20-100oz. of silver per ton, value in coin $511.

"CHAS. KAISERMANN, Assayer, Registry Office, Port Arthur, July 12, 1888."

Assays of six selected samples of ore certified to by Mr. Walpole Roland, Civil and Mining Engineer, as taken from various parts of the Wolverine lodes adjoining the Queen mine, and made by Messrs. Johnson, Matthey, and Co., of Hatton-garden, London, give the following results:

" " " " B, 1557 " " "
" " " " C, 2942 " " "
" " " " D, 2846 " " "
" " " " E, 2613 " " "
" " " " F, 4502 " " "

This gives an average yield per ton of 4,580oz. It will thus be seen that the veins produce silver of enormous value.

The directors refrain from giving any elaborate estimate as to dividends, but it will be seen that, even taking Mr. Roland's figures of 150oz. to the ton at 60ft. from surface, the returns should be very large, and that with the increased value in depth very gratifying returns should be forthcoming.

The following quotations of the leading Australian Silver Mines will show the high value placed upon them by the Australian public; and it may be stated that the average of silver to the ton of rock in the following properties is from 40 to 200oz. only:

(From the "Financial News," March 8, 1888.)

Name of Mine.	Nominal Capital.	Share.	Price.	Value of Mine at present Market Price.
Broken Hill Proprietary	£320,000	£20	£285	£4,560,000
British Broken Hill	1,200,000	5	5	1,200,000

Recent news from the Beaver Silver Mine, as taken from extracts from the "Duluth Evening Journal" of 7th July, 1888, says: "Mr. L. H. Greiser of this city has returned from surveying the now famous Beaver Silver Mine; there is a vein 6ft. wide running about 600 dollars to the ton, and through this is a pay streak 18in. in width, which is a pay streak indeed, being a mass of almost pure silver—so pure that it cannot be stamped, and can hardly be blasted out, and valued at from 10,000 dollars to 20,000 dollars to the ton of rock. The stamp mill on the premises is turning out twenty tons of the poorer quality of rock daily, and enough richer matter is at times taken from the shafts to make a daily output of 30,000 dollars, or nearly 1,000,000 dollars a month." "There is no doubt, as has been often stated, that the region north and east of Duluth and on both sides of the line will soon show the greatest mining developments of the world."

The purchase money for the whole freehold property is £2,000 in cash and £57,000 in fully paid shares, or partly in cash and partly in shares, as the directors determine. The balance of authorised capital, viz., £40,000, remains for working purposes, but this sum is considerably over the amount deemed necessary, so that the directors propose at present to issue only £20,000, reserving £20,000 for future issue.

The vendor pays all expenses up to the first allotment of shares. Steps have been taken to commence operations as soon as possible after the allotment of shares.

Shares will be allotted pro rata, and where no allotment is made the application money will be returned in full.

An important slip issued with the prospectus gives further particulars relating to the Wolverine and other mines in this silver region. There is also a map showing the position of the Queen and Wolverine properties.

The following contracts have been entered into: a contract dated the 12th day of October, 1888, between H. Neville Garland of the one part, and H. E. Winter of the other part, and a contract dated the 15th day of October, 1888, between the said H. E. Winter of the one part and Cecil Thomas Gladstone, as a trustee for the company, of the other part. The vendor has entered into arrangements respecting the expenses of obtaining subscriptions to the capital and other necessary outlays connected with the formation and floating of the company. These arrangements having been made by the vendor only, and not being binding upon the company, it is not considered necessary to give any particulars of them in this prospectus. But to prevent any misunderstanding applicants for shares must be deemed to have had notice of them and to have waived compliance with Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867.

Prospectuses and forms of application can be obtained of the bankers, solicitors, and at the offices of the company. October, 1888.

POOL ADVICE.

READINGS and ERIES.

The Pool to be commenced on Wednesday next, Oct. 24, 1888, will be for the rise in Philadelphia and Reading Shares and Erie Shares.

In consequence of information I have received I have thought it wise to return to American Rails, in which I have been so successful hitherto, to find a subject for the next Pool, and after careful consideration I have decided to select the above two stocks.

I cannot do better than commence by placing before my readers the following Extract from the City Article in "Truth" of Oct. 11, 1888, with reference to American Rails generally:

"THE POSITION OF AMERICAN RAILS.

"American Rails have also been affected by the cry of dearer money, but in this instance the market at first withstood very considerable English selling with great firmness, American buying orders, in fact, absorbed a good deal of the stock offered by nearly home operators. When Wall-street, however, realised that the temporary money scare was likely to scare a good many English speculators into parting with their holdings, it very naturally dropped the market for them. MONEY MARKET.

SATURDAY EVENING.

With the purchase of the large total mentioned this morning the demand for gold for export has entirely ceased for the present, and the discount market was quiet to-day. Some transactions occurred in three months' bills, at a shade under 3¼ per cent., or about 1¾ below official terms, and there was only a moderate demand for short loans, at 2 per cent. On Tuesday an instalment is payable on the Queensland loan, and on Wednesday the Stock Exchange settlement will begin; but about £600,000 will, on balance, be released by the Bank of England on Nov. 3, the amount of the new issue of Government drafts being £1,200,000, against £1,800,000 falling due. This repayment has created some surprise, for the last Treasury statement showed a total of only £833,002 at the credit of the Government at the Bank, and about £2,800,000 has still to be returned to that establishment out of the £3,000,000 recently borrowed for the payment of the dividends on the Funds. There were no gold operations in Threadneedle-street, but the premium on this metal rose yesterday at Buenos Ayres to 48¼ per cent., and it is probable that the Continental banks will not allow further heavy exports without taking protective measures. The present ease in the money market is very deceptive, and an important rebound in rates is likely within the next week or two. A fresh decline has taken place in the foreign exchanges, and the French and German quotations are rapidly tending towards bullion points.

In consequence of a large reflux of coin from the South and West, the weekly return of the New York Associated Banks is a remarkably strong one. The increase in the specie is as much as £1,840,000, and the net deposits are larger by £1,480,000. On the other hand, loans and discounts are £620,000 less, and legal tenders £160,000. The reserve now amounts to £24,480,000, showing an augmentation of £1,680,000, and the surplus is £3,385,000, or £1,310,000 more.

Tenders for Treasury Bills to the amount of £1,200,000 will be received at the Bank of England on Oct. 29, at one o'clock. The Bills will be dated Nov. 3, and will be payable at three or six months after date, at the option of the persons tendering.

Very few bargains were recorded in public securities, yet the tendency generally was firm, the markets being strengthened by the fine weather and the ease in money. Purchases were further induced by the announcement that no gold had been withdrawn from the Bank, and by a rise on the Continental Bourses. Consols (Goschens) were unaltered; but Old Three per Cents. rose ⅛ per cent. A demand was reported for Foreign Government bonds, in sympathy with the recovery abroad, and Hungarian, Italian, Peruvian, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish, and Turkish improved. Argentine, Buenos Ayres Cedulas, and Venezuelan were better, while Greek and Santa Fé receded. Some of the English railways advanced ⅛ to ½ per cent; Brighton "A" was bought, in view of the issue of a good traffic return. North-Eastern and Caledonian, however, exhibited dulness. American railroads opened flat, on New York prices, but closed firmer. Nevertheless, compared with yesterday, Union Pacifics fell 1½, Louisvilles ⅜, and other lines ⅛ to ½. In Wall-street to-day quotations were nearly all higher, mainly due to the favourable Bank figures. Grand Trunks rose about ⅛, and an active inquiry prevailed for Mexican (Vera Cruz) stocks, owing to the official notification that an extra dividend of ⅜ per cent. will be paid on the First Preference and ½ on the Second on account of subvention arrears. The final prices, which were the best, showed a rise of 1½ to 1¾ per cent. Cable and bank shares were inactive, and miscellaneous flatter. A fall of 1 to 2 per cent. occurred in Guinness's and Allsopp's Ordinary stocks. Copper securities were purchased upon the news that a contract, extending the guarantee period for ten years, has been signed by the syndicate and the companies. Rio Tinto were up ⅛, and some of the others ⅛. Diamond and Transvaal gold undertakings were in request.

Dealings in bar silver were limited, and the price was unaltered. Shipments of this metal from New York for Europe during the week have amounted to £31,600. No variation was apparent in the Eastern exchanges. Four and a Half per Cent. Rupee Paper declined ⅛, to 71, ⅛, while the Four per Cents. remained at 67½, ⅝.

Firmness was reported on the Continental Bourses. At Berlin Prussian Four per Cents., Egyptian Preference, Russian, Turkish, Hungarian, Austrian Rentes and Credit, Deutsche Bank, and Lombardo improved, while Egyptian Unified and Mexican receded. In Paris an advance was observable in Rio Tinto, Suez Canal, Credit Foncier, Greek, and Ottoman Bank. The Three per Cent. Rentes were 7½c higher, at 82f 70c, and the Four and a Half per Cents. 5c up, at 105f 85c. Exchange on London (cheques) fell ½c, to 25f 34c.

No striking change is shown in the weekly return of the National Bank of Belgium. Notes in circulation have diminished £115,680; other securities, £45,880; current accounts, £36,640; and coin and bullion, £27,860.

It is a somewhat remarkable fact that, in spite of daily reports of expanding trade, the number of suspensions in this country during the week has been considerably beyond the total in the same period of 1887. This increase is especially large in the grocery and provision trades. Private arrangements have also, it is stated, been more numerous, thus avoiding publicity and heavy bankruptcy costs.

A Reuter's telegram from Paris states that "the preliminaries of the new agreement between the Copper Syndicate and the Rio Tinto Company have been signed. It is stated that the negotiations for the renewal of the contracts with the American mines, for a further period of twelve years, may be regarded as concluded."

With regard to the remarkable expansion of business in the Argentine Republic the following is from the circular, dated Sept. 15, of the River Plate Trust, Loan, and Agency Company (Limited):

> Considerable activity is shown by the enormous number of local companies lately put on the market, many of them tending to promote the development of the outlying sections of the Republic. With the present steady stream of emigration (the figures for the past month being 10,670) colonising occupies the attention of land holders, and as far as the River Bermejo companies have started to open up hitherto unknown districts. The increase of the capital of several of the provincial banks, and the creation of new establishments has given a great impetus to trade in general, the busy aspect of the country being, perhaps, unprecedented. Seventeen new concessions for railways are before Congress, and several extensive public works are proposed; in fact, everything tends to show the enormous strides the country is making forward. The M series of Provincial Cedulas was placed in a few days, the demand being three times in excess of the issue, $25,000,000. The D series of National Cedulas was taken in a like manner, so that the Provincial Bank will place the N series of $50,000,000 and the National Bank the E series, $20,000,000, on the market during the present month. The demand for these fresh issues already exceeds the supply. The municipality are negotiating a loan of $10,000,000 at 4½ per ct. interest per annum, and 1 per ct. amortisation, for the paving and further embellishment of the city.

The pace referred to in this circular is much too fast, and there is a disposition here on the part of cautious investors to avoid investments in securities that are based upon wild speculations in land.

Under the title of the Silver Wolverine (Limited) a new company has been launched to acquire and develop a freehold property, comprising about eighty acres, in Ontario, Canada. The adjoining Queen Silver Mine is stated to be turning out ore yielding up to 4,000 ounces of silver to the ton. The capital is £100,000, in shares of £1 each, of which 80,000 are now offered for subscription.

According to Kemp's Mercantile Gazette the number of failures in England and Wales gazetted during the week ending Oct. 20 was 100, including 19 in the grocery and provision trades, 14 in the drapery, silk, and woollen, 10 in the leather and coach, 10 in the wine, spirit, and beer, and eight in the building trades. At the corresponding period of last year the total was 79, showing an increase now of 21.

Messrs. I. Thomson, T. Bonar, and Co. notify that ninety-one bonds and 152 shares of the Provincial Orel-Vitebsk Railway Company were drawn at St. Petersburg on Sept. 24 (Oct. 6) for payment on and after Oct. 17.

Including £627 brought down, the report of the Demerara Railway Company (Limited) for the half-year ended June shows net revenue amounting to £5,202, out of which, after payment of the preference interest, it is proposed to declare a dividend at the rate of 1 per ct. per annum on the Ordinary stock. The sum left to be carried forward is £352. It is added that the company's accounts have again been adversely affected by the severe drought alluded to in the last report.

At a meeting of the directors of the Buenos Ayres and Valparaiso Transandine Railway Company (Limited), interest was declared at the rate of 7 per ct. per annum, less income-tax, on the Seven per Ct. Preferred shares, payable on and after Oct. 31.

On account of ill-health, Mr. Geo. Kynoch, M.P., has resigned his position as director and managing director of G. Kynoch and Co. (Limited), and the board have appointed Mr. Cumberland as manager. There is no intention of continuing the office of managing director.

The directors of the Reliance Mutual Life Assurance Society have appointed Mr. Griffith, for many years manager of their West-end branch, to be their chief secretary at the head office in King William-street, in the room of the late Mr. H. Unwin, deceased.

For the purpose of preparing the dividend warrants for the half-year ended June 30 last, payable to stockholders registered on Nov. 5, the transfer books of the Rohilkund and Kumaon Railway Company will be closed from Nov. 5 to 15, inclusive.

It is notified by the English Association of American Bond and Share Holders (Limited) that they are prepared to pay, on and after Oct. 22, Coupon No. 5 on their certificates, against the preferred shares of the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul Railway Company, for the half-yearly dividend payable on that day at the rate of 5 per ct. per annum.

The London manager of the Freehold Investment and Banking Company of Australia (Limited) is in the receipt of cable advice from the head office, Melbourne, giving the following results of the half-year just concluded: "Profits, £109,000; carried to reserve, £50,000; capital increased, £29,000. Special valuation has been made of properties showing surplus additional of £665,000."

At a meeting of the Maxim-Weston Electric Company (Limited) held yesterday, the special resolution passed on Oct. 3, reducing the capital from £125,000 to £62,500, was confirmed.

It is intimated that the National Bank of New Zealand (Limited), Old Broad-street, will pay the half-year's interest, due Nov. 1, on the Oamaru (New Zealand) Harbour Board Six per Ct. Loan of £100,000, and on the issued bonds of the City of Auckland (New Zealand) Six per Ct. Loan of £250,000.

The Bank of New Zealand will pay the interest due Nov. 1 on the outstanding bonds of the New Plymouth Harbour Board Six per Ct. Loan of £200,000.

For the week ended Sept. 1 the Anglo-Argentine Tramway receipts were £3,575, against £3,414 last year.

It is announced that the Consolidated Esmeralda (Limited) have received the following cablegram from their superintendent, dated Oct. 19: "Crushed 333 tons; yield 840 ounces bullion; value, £2,066." This, with the previous shipment announced Oct. 8, will make 612 tons and 1,660 ounces bullion, valued at £4,028, for one month's work.

The traffic receipts of the Vienna General Omnibus Company (Limited), for the week ending Oct. 13, were £1,359 6s 4d, against £1,314 1s 11d in the corresponding period of 1887.

AGRICULTURAL OUTLOOK.

Harvesting grain is very far from being concluded in the North of Scotland, where the crops have never ripened, and those that have been cut require a great deal of conditioning in the fields before being placed in stock. The wisest course to take with extensive breadths of green corn still standing uncut in mountainous districts, which at this advanced period never can come fully to maturity, would be to convert it to silage, so far as making the best of the crop is concerned; but the owners would no doubt say they do not want silage, for the simple reason that other kinds of winter food for stock happen this year to be so very abundant that if they were to take the course indicated the new kind of stock food would be likely to remain on their hands unused the entire winter. If the farmer has plenty of means, it might pay him to buy in sheep and cattle in large numbers, as extra stock, under present circumstances, and then the green corn, if converted to silage, might meet with a remunerative return. But even this would be somewhat doubtful, owing to the present high rates of store sheep and cattle and the uncertainty as to what they would be likely to be worth next spring, after having had their winter's grazing. Nor has the grain harvest terminated in England as yet, so far as the bean crop is concerned. Considering the large amount of fine weather and the brightness of skies for some weeks past, this may seem strange to many; but fields of beans appear everywhere in various parts of the kingdom mostly in stook, and if the sheaves are examined, the stalks and many of the pods are still full of sap, and have a very green appearance. If these sheaves were hauled together and stacked in their present condition, a great deal of injurious fermentation would, no doubt, take place in the stacks. But it becomes a question of moment whether straw should not be placed in layers with the bean sheaves, so that the stacking be accomplished while the present beautiful weather lasts, for at this advanced period it would be vain to hope for its prolongation much longer. Besides which, however bright the days are from about eleven in the morning until near sunset, the drying influence is still but slow, especially as the stooks are saturated at other times by the heavy fogs which prevail in the night season and in the early mornings. To all appearance some of the beans would not get in a fit condition for stacking were they to remain exposed to atmospheric influences for several weeks longer, even supposing a rainy season should not set in.

In all districts where potatoes are extensively grown digging and storing crops have been very assiduously engaged in during the past week, and the weather influences have been remarkably favourable for these operations. There is likely to be much less waste of tubers than usual owing to the dry, free-working condition of the soil, causing fewer of them to be hid. There is, however, some waste of another kind owing to a certain proportion of the crops being slightly diseased. This is the case, it appears, in Scotland. Still the evil appears to be only partial, and, taking the balance of reports, potato crops will be sufficiently good to prevent scarcity and dearness of this important article of human dietary in the coming winter. Farmers in many districts of the kingdom are also busy in lifting and storing mangel-wurzel crops, and as recent severe frosts have killed many of the tops and much more growth is not to be expected, it seems wise to take advantage of the present dry state of the land and fineness of the weather for conducting this kind of harvesting, especially as it is always excessively laborious and injurious to the land when it takes place in a wet season. Great caution ought to be taken, however, to place the roots in security as fast as they are lifted, so as not to leave any lying exposed in rows on the land at nightfall. No root is more liable to be injured by frost than mangel-wurzel. While remaining growing in the land they can stand a few severe night frosts—either their leaves shelter the skins of the bulbs or any trifling affection is thrown off again; but after the bulbs are lifted a very slight exposure to frost will make the skins turn black, and the bulbs subsequently will not keep for any length of time. If inconvenient to cart the roots off the land as fast as they are lifted they should be placed in heaps and carefully covered up with the leaves that had previously been severed from them.

There have been several severe frosts and heavy fogs of late, causing nights to be remarkably cold as well as damp. Owners of cattle ought to be more than usually careful, under such circumstances, to bring all delicate animals into yards at night where they can obtain shelter; and if they have only a little wholesome straw to eat, the alternation of diet would be very salutary, and be far better than frosted grass. In fact, it is only reasonable that all cattle would be far better taken into yards at night, or to some sheltered paddocks near the homestead where they could have a little dry coarse fodder given them when nights at the present period are either wet or frosty. Grain is obtained in another way, besides making the animals more healthy, for when they ramble on pastures, under such circumstances, they destroy more grass with their feet than they devour. Thus it has been said that cattle sometimes have five mouths. Very fully must it be admitted, however, that seldom has there been an autumn more thoroughly advantageous for making the best of grass in pastures, and this is especially so in respect to low-lying districts. Owing to the dry state of the land there is very little waste this year, and, what is more, the herbage seems to have more heart in it and to do the stock more good than when it is so very washy and succulent. Dairy farmers have found this of special advantage recently, and it is also of equal, if not more, importance to those who have grazing cattle feeding for beef. The beautiful autumn we are enjoying proves so thoroughly beneficial in many ways that even those farmers who have been most desponding in the past are at length beginning to be a little more hopeful of the worst of agricultural depression having been passed. Thus at the Framlingham Farmers' Club dinner on Friday, after Mr. Greene, M.P., who occupied the chair, had given it as his opinion that agriculturists had at length touched bottom in the slough through which they had been sinking so long, Mr. W. Manfield quite confirmed him in that view. This circumstance is the more noteworthy as no one has distinguished himself more than Mr. Manfield in the past in raising the complaint, both at the meetings of the Central Chamber of Agriculture and at those meetings in Suffolk where fair trade has been so persistently agitated for. In fact, on the present occasion he asserted that free trade had crippled hundreds of landlords, ruined thousands of farmers, and deprived tens of thousands of labourers of regular employment, yet he thought it had now done its worst. Taking the corn and root crops together, he considered that the farmers of Suffolk have no cause to complain of their realisations this year, consequently he agreed with the chairman that the future is to some extent pregnant with hope. Mr. Greene made another remark at this meeting which is quite as applicable to many other parts of the kingdom as to Suffolk. He said that owing to farmers having lost a great deal of their capital the land during the past few years had not been farmed so highly as it ought to be, but that the fact ought not to be lost sight of that good farming under all circumstances is much more remunerative than the kind of management that is sparing in manure, stock, and labour. Mr. Greene's homily, no doubt, admits of far more extensive and practical treatment, for there can be no doubt those who have weathered the storm best and have suffered least from the long-protracted depression have been those who had sufficient capital to keep their farms fully stocked and in the highest state of fertility.

On Thursday last the old-established herd of Mr. Thomas Duckham, who for seven years was tenant farmers' M.P. for Herefordshire, was dispersed at Baysham Court by Messrs. Alfred and Dearman Edwards. Mr. Haywood, who presided at the luncheon, expressed the hope that although Mr. Duckham was relinquishing farming pursuits he would not retire entirely into private life. He had watched Mr. Duckham's course, he said, for a great number of years, and thought that no one had been more instrumental in furthering the interests, not only of his fellow cattle breeders, but those of the farming community generally. Mr. Duckham's cattle were brought out at the sale ring in excellent condition, many large breeders expressing themselves in terms of admiration at their general character, some asserting that it would be impossible to find in another herd so many fine large-sized cows of such grand merit. Prices were not, however, very high, except for the best. Mr. W. H. Foster, M.P., gave 57 guineas and 43 guineas for two of the cows, others going for 47 guineas and 45 guineas, but the general average was best for the bulls and the two-year-old heifers, that for eight bulls being £42 5s 3d, and for heifers £30 1s. The general average for 79 animals, including calves, was, however, about £28 each. Mr. Duckham owns a high-class flock of Shropshire sheep; but this, as well as his other stock and implements, will not be sold until the spring of the ensuing year, Mr. Duckham's tenancy of the farm expiring at Lady Day.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

NOTES AND ANTICIPATIONS.

The racing of last week was for the most part very commonplace, the only features of real interest being the Orleans Nursery and the Great Sapling Plate, both decided at Sandown Park. In each instance a few useful two-year-olds were included amongst the competitors, and whereas a penalty just robbed Laureate of success in the Nursery he was carrying close upon a couple of stone more than when he won a similar engagement over the same ground at the beginning of September. The two intermediate triumphs of this handsome son of Petrarch had included the Rous Memorial Stakes at Newmarket, and he will have to be taken into account when speculation commences in a general sense upon next year's "blue riband." Laureate, it may be added, is not intended to sport silk during the remainder of the season, and other youngsters who have likewise retired are Chitabob, El Dorado, Gay Hampton, and Ben Strome. Thus, of the public champions, Donovan was the first to start work and will be the last to leave off, so that if unable to boast of the unbeaten two-year-old certificate that belonged to The Bard—another son of Petrarch—in 1885, his career has been equally remarkable and attended with much greater profit. The conqueror of Laureate in the Orleans Nursery—the Irish-bred Theophilus—possesses a good turn of speed, and the unusual length of the course—seven furlongs—had alone enabled Fleur de Lys to beat him a fortnight beforehand in a big affair at Kempton Park. The Great Sapling Plate bore collateral testimony to the autumn merit of Donovan, as Picquet, who failed to extend him when the recipient of 8lb in the Hopeful Stakes, at the First October Meeting, now made a bold bid all the way, and if outstayed by Aristos, he managed to lower the colours of a warm favourite from William Goater's stable in the dark Poet Laureate. It was with Aristos a case of steady perseverance to secure winning honours, as he ran second to Fair Marion at Windsor in May, only beaten by a head, and was second again to Help in the Rous Plate, and third to Robin Hood and Your Grace in the Prince of Wales's Nursery at Doncaster. Aristos, who claims parentage from Highborn and Nancy Lee, was a well-bought yearling for 170 guineas, and another bargain was Quakeress, the value of the Hersham Two-Year-Old Stakes at Sandown Park, with the selling price added, yielding a good profit upon the 50 guineas given by Mr. Carr for this daughter of Beau Brummel last July twelvemonth. To turn from the past to the future, there is no possible chance that the Newmarket Houghton will equal in interest the Second October. The majority of the events that should be big playing cards are certain to prove just the reverse, and at the outset the Criterion will compare badly with the days when it was regarded as a searching and important test of stamina. Then, again, the Dewhurst Plate looks entirely at the mercy of Donovan, while most of the subscribers to the Free Handicap and the Jockey Club Cup are either hors de combat or not in active training. Thus, independently of the Cambridgeshire, we shall see a preponderance of weak fields unless the races that close overnight come well to the rescue. Still, the weather signs are so far very favourable, and, however much the company may fall off towards the end of the long week, a large crowd can with confidence be expected to witness the first Cambridgeshire over the new course. Just at present the market upon this popular handicap seems to be much contracted, and on Saturday inquiries beyond Ténébreuse, Mamia, Bismarck, and Acmé were few and far between. Of those the Cesarewitch heroine had so pleased the critics at headquarters in a strong gallop with Sheen, Love-in-Idleness, and Blondel, that her favouritism was further strengthened, and a backer of the filly, at good prices, experienced no difficulty in laying the substantial bet of 4,000 to 1,000. A natural sequel to this demonstration was the weakening of Sheen, and others that received rough handling were Gallinule, Harpenden, Queen Bee, Trayles, and Danbydale, of whom the last-named pair may be looked upon in the light of very doubtful starters. The first day's card contains the Criterion Stakes, and no encouragement exists to back Gold under the full penalty, as he was one of the earliest in trouble for the Middle Park Plate. Enthusiast and the Ma Belle colt cut poor figures also in the same race, and in the belief that RYDAL will turn out the best of a second-class lot, I am inclined to apprehend a little danger from Maynooth, if he has benefitted by his rest since the Spring. With Aristos not eligible to take part in the Plate of 100 guineas, since he lost his maidenhood at Sandown Park, LOVE-IN-IDLENESS should be equal to disposing of Drizzle and Red Palmer, and recent form points to THE TYKE for the Flying Stakes, as Noble Chieftain has easier tasks further on in the programme. Between ISOSCELES and ILSENSTEIN I am divided for the First Welter Handicap, while D'ORSAY or FREEMASON may win the Criterion Nursery, CHILPERIC the All-Aged Selling Plate, and KING COLE the Selling Plate for two-year-olds.

Amongst the latest scratchings for the Cambridgeshire are Thunderstorm and Attila, of whom the former is reported unsound. This is a misfortune, as he has always shown good back end form, and last November he scored a capital double event in the shape of the Derby Cup and the Lancashire Cup at Manchester. His place might be taken by Tissaphernes, and at any rate I have included Mr. Barclay's four-year-old for the present in the appended list of

Apart from the fact that he is handicapped to the top of his form, Fullerton was in no trim when he ran a fortnight ago, and may be regarded as quite harmless. Another of the top weights, Harpenden, has been on the shelf since the first week of the season, and, considering the hard state of the ground, I should think that he will be an absentee. Of the remainder of the doubtful starters Trayles and Danbydale are, if the market speaks truly, giving way to Sandal, and Polydor did not leave Stanton in company of Phil. The journey to France and back seems to have agreed with Ténébreuse, and, as already mentioned, she created a most favourable impression on Saturday morning. At the same time I have yet to learn that the gallop amounted to a trial, and those who summed up sufficient courage to book the knocked out prices about Sheen may be able to realise a profit. Ténébreuse is set a widely different task to the one which she so easily accomplished in the Second October week, and should, therefore, she bring off the Rosebery and Foxhall "double," it would be impossible to begrudge her the merit of the second part of the triumph. All her Cesarewitch opponents renew the conflict upon considerably different terms, and the new set of antagonists include the turned-loose Mamia, the highly-tried Bismarck, and notable handicap winners in Lisbon, Candlemas, and Veracity. Opinions differ as to the part played by Acme in the Cesarewitch, some of the spectators who saw the race from the neighbourhood of the Bushes holding to the belief that he looked all over the winner until Ténébreuse joined the leading rank, and others being as positive that he did not show such good speed as Trayles. It was my idea that the latter travelled as fast as anything across the Flat, and, although his backers may be deprived of a run on Tuesday, he might repay them in the future. The trial of Acme and Gallinule in the fog was reckoned such a near thing that, for a day or two, they continued to keep close company in the quotations. But now they have drifted somewhat widely apart, and, with none of his old friends to the rescue when Gallinule was driven back to 20 to 1, he does not look like breaking the spell which has for so long clung to the numerously-tenanted Bedford Lodge stable. Acme, on the contrary, is in fair demand, and will probably run well. Of the Duke of Beaufort's pair, Button Park and Rêve d'Or, the horse made a better show in the Cesarewitch than the mare, and was very prominent once on the extreme right. He may require, however, more scope of ground than nine furlongs, as he was chopped up the whole of the way in the September Handicap at Manchester, and on that running would not beat Veracity, who is now much fancied, even if asked to travel a little beyond his best distance. Lisbon cannot beat Candlemas, judging from the Chesterfield Cup at Goodwood, and, although the credentials of the Kingsclere candidate only leave him with a second-class chance, it may be argued in his favour that he blooms late in the season. When Belle Mahone so unexpectedly carried off the Park Hill Stakes at Doncaster, Zanzibar could not stride over a straw, and the boot had been very much on the other leg when they met a couple of days beforehand. Tissaphernes has yet to make his appearance in the price current, and as regards Phil, who has performed with consistent indifference since he lowered the pride of Seabreeze in the Rous Memorial Stakes at Ascot, a report was circulated on Saturday that he had been beaten in a trial by Polydor. Be that as it may, the three-year-old did not commence the journey with him from Stanton, and perhaps Phil may recover some of his lost ground before the fall of the flag. The difficulty experienced by Sandal in getting rid of Ormuz in the Great Challenge Stakes, added to the moderate display of the two-year-old in the Orleans Nursery at Sandown Park, justifies me in searching beyond Lord Calthorpe's filly, and for such as Chelsea, Admiral Benbow, Cactus, and Queen Bee I am unable to express a favourable opinion. More attention must be given, however, to Bismarck and Mamia, and the knowledge of what the three-year-old can do in private with The Rejected and Brownie would make me believe in him immensely, could I shut my eyes to his behaviour in the Stewards' Cup at Goodwood. That he possessed the necessary ability to win that prize was a confident opinion of mine, and at five furlongs he had simply squandered his field. But in the last furlong, without being squeezed, he swerved almost from one side of the course to the other, and, although I may have to acknowledge myself in the wrong, I doubt Bismarck staying home. Mamia has fulfilled two engagements this Autumn, and flew at high game, both in the Lancashire Plate and the Champion Stakes. At Manchester she was within respectable hail of the leaders until nearly knocked over the rails, and at Newmarket she did well enough behind Friar's Balsam and Minting to be advanced into prominent favouritism. A previous depression in the market had been caused by the statement that she was worsted in a short spin with some two-year-olds, and now it is said that she did not shine in a gallop with April Fool last Thursday. For all that, those who are now assailing Mamia may be in ignorance of the weight at which she was placed alongside April Fool, and, if the attempt to improve the filly since the Champion Stakes has not had a contrary effect, she ought to win the Cambridgeshire. On paper she represents Zanzibar at 6st or under, and yet the allotment to Mr. Milner's filly was 8st. To take them in the order of the handicap, Ténébreuse, Acme, Sheen, Candlemas, and Mamia are the five that I shall select to provide the winner of the Cambridgeshire, and, although I am quite unprepared for the market outburst, must remain my chief selection. If none the worse for her exertions in the Criterion, RYDAL should make sure of the Home Bred Post Produce Stakes, while BRAW LASS may be recommended for the Plate of £200, L'ABBESSE DE JOUARRE for the Rous Nursery, and GUY MANNERING for the Water Hall Plate.

Passing on to Wednesday, Donovan's extra weight in the Dewhurst Plate is only 3lb more than that he romped home with in the Middle Park Plate, and although Australia may improve somewhat upon her initial effort, there is no cause for fear on the part of DONOVAN's admirers. The All-Aged Stakes will be an interesting affair should Noble Chieftain, Link Boy, and Paloma enter the lists, and ARISTOS can be depended upon to follow up his Sandown Park luck in the New Nursery. On Thursday a wholesale weeding out is permissible for the Free Handicap, as Ayrshire and Orbit have left off work for the season, and Merry Andrew, Crowberry, Satiety, and Chillington are in queer street. Acmé is called upon to allow 18lb to SHEEN, an impossible paper undertaking so far, although the victory of the former in the Cambridgeshire would, of course, place matters in a different light. In the Cheveley Stakes SWEETBRIAR will want to be at concert-pitch to give the weight away to the pick of the maidens, and there is less risk in selecting ANTIBES for the Troy Stakes and NOBLE CHIEFTAIN for the Plate of £200 (Rous Course). Until the revelation of the sealed nominee of the Duke of Beaufort, EIRIDSPORD looks like holding his own in the Jockey Club Cup on Friday, and the Houghton Stakes rests between D'ORSAY and TESTATOR.

Sunday Night. HOTSPUR.

LONDON BETTING—SATURDAY.

There was a capital attendance at the chief City resort to-day, and a good deal of wagering took place over the Cambridgeshire. Ténébreuse was in excellent demand, and closed at 375 to 100. Mamia, after 6 to 1 had been taken, finished at 11 to 2, and Bismarck travelled well at 13 to 2. Acmé met with attention at 100 to 9, after 100 to 8 had been recorded, but Sheen declined to 20 to 1. Candlemas and Gallinule each figured at the same rate. To Veracity 1000 to 45 was twice recorded, and Polydor met with attention at 40 to 1. Belle Mahone did not go well, and after 33 to 1 had been taken declined to 50 to 1, a price also booked to Rêve d'Or and Cactus. The outside 100 to 1 division comprised Trayles, Danbydale, Harpenden, Queen Bee, and Fullerton. Prices:

CRICKET.

COUNTY QUALIFICATION.

The Sussex County Club intend to bring the subjoined resolution before the meeting of representatives of counties, to be held as usual at Lord's in December next, and also before the Cricket Council. They will be glad if other counties will lay them before their committees for consideration. The resolutions are: "That any cricketer who shall have played for a county for a period of three years under the residential qualification shall be qualified to play for that county for any period or number of years he may choose (although he may have removed to and be then residing in another county), unless he break his qualification by playing for another county (for instance, the county of his birth, or the county in which he may then reside)." If the above is not accepted the following will be proposed: "That during the two years a cricketer may be qualifying to play for another county, under the residential qualification, he shall be allowed to play for the county for which he has previously been playing under that rule."

FOOTBALL.

THE MAORIS v. MIDLAND COUNTIES.

This encounter took place on the Warwickshire County Ground, Edgbaston, Birmingham, on Saturday afternoon, before 5,000 spectators. The Maoris kicked off at half-past three, and early in the game their superior combination manifested itself, the ball being continually in the home "twenty-five." Fifteen minutes from the start Warwick obtained the first try, at which M'Ausland failed; but five minutes afterwards Wynyard dropped a clever goal; and when half-time arrived the score was: Maories, one goal and a try to nil. Restarting, the game was of an even character, and M'Ausland dropped another beautiful goal. Elliott soon after added a try, which M'Ausland also scored from; and when time was called the Maoris were left the winners by three goals and one try to nil. Sides:

Midland Counties: A. C. Hill (Coventry) (back), F. J. S. Gray (Wolverhampton), W. Cox (Crusaders), and F. Adams (Crusaders) (three-quarter backs), R. A. Rotherham (Coventry) and G. F. CANADIANS v. OLD CARTHUSIANS.

This match was played at Kennington Oval on Saturday afternoon before a large number of spectators. A very even game resulted, and it was not until near the close that Sturges-Jones, from a pass by Cooper, sent the ball through the Canadian goal, the Carthusians thus winning by a goal to nil. The following were the teams:

TO-DAY'S MATCHES.

THE MAORIS v. MIDDLESEX.

He selected a Middlesex team, and will place a strong fifteen in the field. The following are the teams:

NAVAL REVIEW AND LAUNCH.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

NAPLES, Oct. 17.

I have come to the conclusion that in order to witness any celebration, "funzione," or spectacle in Italy, when the Indivisible Kingdom is en fête, one must be an Emperor or King, or at the very least somebody in the nature of an immediate hanger-on to the Imperial or Royal purple—say, a Councillor of State or a Court-lackey. Above all, what one must not be is a journalist. If any man, native or foreigner, being of the journalistic persuasion, desire to fulfil his duty to his employers and to the public in times like these, he must shun official protection as he would the imminent deadly upas-tree, and prowl around furtively on his own account. The more warmly he be recommended to the authorities, the more sedulously will they frustrate his ends, if he commit the fatal mistake of applying to them for "facilities." They will give him any number of tickets and passes fraught with splendid promise, having previously instructed the executive to prevent him from reaching the places to which those vouchers delusively profess to admit him. They will make elaborate dispositions on paper for his accommodation, earnestly counselling him to adhere to their prescriptions with absolute exactitude, lest—to their poignant regret—he should fail to reap all the advantages they have been at such enormous pains to secure to him. Having thus bound him down to time and place, with a minuteness and explicitude that leave no room for misunderstanding, and having hindered him from making any arrangements of his own for seeing what he has been sent to see, they will then calmly ignore all their pledges, and leave him to his fate. Let us say that the Ministry of the Exterior has invited him to such and such a ceremony; the Ministry of War takes measures to hinder him from getting to the locality at which the "function" is to come off. Or he is bidden by the Municipio to a reception—the police inspects his ticket, shrugs its shoulders in deprecation of his wrath, and smilingly informs him that "by superior order no one can possibly be permitted to pass through the cordon." Afterwards, when he complains, he is sorrowfully told that "there has been a malinteso—a trifling misunderstanding between the respective departments—and that his indignation cannot possibly be so intense and fiery as that experienced by the authorities to whom he attributes his disappointment." The officials who administer this consolation to him do not chuckle audibly, or wink in a manner visible to the naked eye; on the contrary, their fine expressive countenances are convulsed with grief, or, at the very least, overcast with a shade of touching melancholy. Their keen relish of his discomforture is admirably concealed by a mask of sympathetic anger or sadness; they look so sorry for him that he can hardly help feeling sorry for them, whilst in reality their Machiavellian hearts are throbbing high with exultation.

The train specially affected to the transport of representatives of the Press from Rome to Naples was to start on Monday night at a few minutes past eleven. Nearly all the journalists invited to travel by it were in the station at the time appointed. The train was not even "made up"; two hours later it was not yet in readiness. Meanwhile two or three other trains of the excursionist order were despatched to Naples. By these the journalists were not allowed to leave, their tickets only entitling them to use the "Treno della stampa." It was perhaps a little trying to wait hour after hour at dead of night in a draughty station, seeing thousands of tourists expedited to Naples instead of oneself and one's press-colleagues, in defiance of right and in breach of contract. The crowning facetiousness of the authorities, however, had yet to come. When the journalists' train was at last completed and ready to start not one of them was allowed to enter it. Some hundreds of sightseers who had paid for their tickets—we were guests of the State—were packed into it, and off it went with a triumphant shriek, leaving us planted on the platform, a picture of rage and despair. Presently a scratch train was made up of old rickety carriages and transport vans; and in this the worn-out pressmen were conveyed to Naples at a slow and intermittent crawl, arriving at their destination "with an unavoidable delay of six hours," as the official organ gracefully put it next day. Once in Naples they again fell victims to the "cordon" system, in just as full force there as it had been in Rome. They were told without fail to embark at seven this morning on board the steamer set apart for them by the tender solicitude of the Government. It took them two hours to get through the "cordons." When they were all embarked their steamer sallied out into the bay, not to touch land again save at Castellamare until five of the afternoon, and the discovery was made that there was nothing to eat or drink on board. Thus international journalism was the guest of Italy for once in a way; and this is how she entertained it. Two hours' sordid, demoralising struggle; ten hours' fast; the worst place in the whole cortège of craft placed at the disposal of "invitati distinti"; and systematic snubbing at the hands of every official "dressed in a little brief authority." What were all the splendours of the naval show, the excitements of the launch, the glories of the bay itself, the magnificence of the weather—an ideal Italian day, sparkling with golden sunshine, the blue sky radiant and tremulous with light, the breeze at once balmy and exhilarating—to men exhausted with hunger and thirst, irritated by a hundred petty grievances, and smarting under a keen sense of wrong?

Enough of this disagreeable topic. From the "Italianissimo" point of view, Naples has scored a far greater success than Rome, as far as the reception of the German Emperor by the people has been concerned. This fact—and it really is a fact—is mainly attributable to the excitability and demonstrativeness of the Neapolitans as contrasted with the languor and reserve of the Romans. On his arrival here yesterday afternoon William II. was greeted with such a storm of acclamations as no Roman crowd ever raised in his honour, and similar outbursts of popular goodwill have reached his ears every time he has shown himself in public. During the gala performance at San Carlo, although he was not present, the Prussian National Anthem was called for again and again by the audience, listened to upstanding, and cheered to the echo. For the merest chance of catching a distant glimpse of his Majesty the Neapolitans crowded their streets and clustered in their balconies, scaling the very house-tops at giddy and perilous heights, all day long and far into the night. Words can convey no adequate idea of such a concourse of people; it must be seen to be realised, and, having been seen, can never be forgotten. Nor will I attempt to describe the ceremonies of reception at station, palace, museums, and other show-places. All these ricevementi resemble one another like "bonnet blanc" and "blanc bonnet"; they have to be gone through of course, but are equally tiresome to actors and spectators.

The really interesting and supremely picturesque incidents of the Imperial visit were the launch and the parade of Italy's picked war-ships. The enormous vessel added to-day to the Italian navy, and christened by Signora Acton (wife of the Vice-Admiral commanding the squadron stationed in the bay), by the name of Umberto Primo, is a sister ship to the Lepanto and Italia, and also strongly resembles the Duilio, hitherto Italy's most formidable man-of-war, as far as armament is concerned, than which she is, however, about a size larger, being 387ft in length, over 13,000 tons register, 26ft draught, and 19,500 horse-power. She will be armed with four 68-ton guns, thirty-six guns of smaller calibre, and ten mitrailleuses, and will, under full steam, attain a maximum speed of nineteen knots. She has been built in the Royal Navy Dockyard of Castellamare, whence she was successfully launched at a few minutes before twelve this morning. As she glided into the bay the first cry of "Viva l'Italia" was uttered by William II., and echoed by a hundred thousand voices. Of the ceremonies of blessing and baptizing the huge ship—of the Royal pavilion and its august occupants—in fact, of all the details that lent historical and personal interest to the launch, the representatives of the press could see nothing, the tribune allotted to them having been erected, with characteristic forethought, on a spot shut out from a view of aught but part of the Humbert's hull. They could, however, hear the trumpets' blare, signalling the order to knock away the "shores," and the shouts that hailed the fracture of the bottle of "Asti Spumante" as it struck the ship's side. It is painful to think that there were discontented spirits among them who regarded these privileges as unsatisfactory.

The launch having been achieved without the least mishap or hitch, their Majesties and suites, amid the booming of cannon, embarked on board the Royal yacht Savoia, an armed vessel of about 3,000 tons and 5,000-horse power, and steamed away to the Riva di Chiaja, where the defile of the warships constituting the squadron took place immediately after the Royal party had partaken of luncheon. At three o'clock, the torpedo-boats leading, the vessels, forty-seven in number, moved forward in two lines, and passed on either side of the Savoia, saluting as they swept by in stately succession, and keeping their distances with admirable precision. The smaller craft shot past swiftly, at the rate of about fifteen knots; the monster ironclads—among which was the memorable Affondatore, in the turret of which Persano took refuge from the Austrian fire at Lissa—went by at a more dignified and deliberate pace, the Lepanto first, followed by the Italia, Dandolo, and Duilio, giants of about her own size and strength, in the order indicated. In the brief intervals between the roar of their enormous guns the cheering of their crews ("Hurrah!" and "Viva il Rè!") could be heard all over the bay. Of this imposing sight the German Emperor was an eager and manifestly much interested spectator. With the Italian Minister of Marine, Admiral Brin, who had been close by his side throughout the launch, he appeared to be in almost continuous conversation whilst the procession of warships was gliding past; and shortly after the Royal party had landed near Egg Castle his Majesty sent the Grand Cross of the Red Eagle to the Admiral, in token of his entire satisfaction with the naval achievements of the day. I should mention that the Umberto I. was designed by Admiral Brin, to whom the Italian navy owes, in no inconsiderable measure, its present high state of efficiency.

Whatever William II. may have thought of the troops paraded before him a few days ago at Cento Celle, there can be no doubt that he was delighted with the performances of the Italian squadron this afternoon. I am assured that he gave expression to his gratification with an enthusiasm that was obviously unfeigned, and in terms of unqualified praise and admiration. He thanked the King repeatedly for affording him so splendid and exhilarating a spectacle, saying (I am told) that "it had gladdened his heart"; he congratulated Signor Crispi and Admiral Brin repeatedly on the "glorious results of their patriotic efforts to develop the naval forces of Italy to a strength worthy of their great and valorous nation"; at the luncheon on board the Savoia he proposed the toast of "The Italian Navy" with a fervour that communicated itself to all present. In compliment to the gallant Italian sailors, he—a soldier of soldiers—wore admiral's uniform, in which I fancy he has only once before been publicly seen, even by his own subjects. Altogether he appears to have "let himself go" with that engaging geniality that is so especially sympathetic to the Italian character; and at the present moment William II. is unquestionably as popular in this great city of Naples as he can possibly be in the capital of his own mighty Empire.

Signor Crispi has been honoured, here as at Rome, by his Majesty's particular and marked attention. The Kaiser, as I hear, thinks very highly of his talents as a statesman, and recognises him quite openly as "the man of the situation." With Count Herbert Bismarck the Italian Prime Minister appears to have struck up a cordial friendship. Shortly after his arrival here the German Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs asked to be presented to the ladies of Signor Crispi's family, who reside in Naples; I hear that after the visite de cérémonie, he was entertained en famille at their villa. From all that I can gather, as well from German as Italian sources, it appears to be beyond the shadow of a doubt that the political and military alliance between this country and Germany, to which important confederation Austria-Hungary is also a party, has been materially strengthened and consolidated by the Kaiser's visit to Rome and Naples. At this moment it is certainly flourishing like a green bay tree, and there is every reason to believe that it will endure for a long time to come. It is a potent combination for peace or war; Europe, nay civilised mankind at large, may rest assured that the great monarchs and eminent statesmen who have brought it about regard it as a solid guarantee of general peace, and desire that other nations besides their own should look upon it in that light only. This, I feel convinced, is the true meaning of all that has taken place in this country with relation to the Imperial visit—including the episode of the Vatican—and I feel that the gratitude of all peace-loving peoples has been well deserved by the august personages who have played the leading parts in the recent interchange of courtesies and friendly assurances that have drawn together the great German and Italian nations.

ATTACKS ON SUAKIN.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

SUAKIN, Oct. 21.

The rebels during the last three nights have shown renewed activity. They have fired guns nightly, their shells doing slight damage to the forts and causing a few casualties. Last night the rebels brought their guns within 600 yards of the water forts and fired several shells. Four of these struck the forts without doing any harm, only one exploding.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—President Cleveland will come to this city on the 27th inst. to review a parade of the Democratic business men's organisation.

Mr. O'Reilly, Treasurer of the Parnell Defence Fund, says that he has received contributions to the fund amounting to several thousand dollars.

THE VATICAN.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

ROME, Oct. 21.—The Moniteur de Rome, the recognised organ of the Vatican, to-day publishes a leading article highly eulogising Herr Windthorst, leader of the Centre Party in the German Reichstag, and calling upon him valiantly to maintain the struggle for fresh concessions in favour of denominational schools. The journal further praises Herr Windthorst for having understood and declared that the Pontifical question is the knot of the entire situation, and that the patriotism, honour, and lot of Prussian Catholics are bound up in this drama, the issue of which can alone give peace, security, and order to Europe.

SOUTH AFRICAN RAILWAYS.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

CAPE TOWN, Oct. 20.—The Free State Express publishes an emphatic denial from President Kruger to the assertion made in the Zuid Afrikaan that he had proposed a compromise with the Cape Government in favour of an extension of the Colonial Railway to Johannesberg. Mr. Kruger declares that he maintains his adherence to his original policy of support to the Delagoa Bay Railway.

LONDON V. BIRMINGHAM.

On Saturday an important rifle match, the results of which have been anticipated with much interest for some time past in the Volunteer Force, came off at the Sandwell Park ranges, near Birmingham, and produced some splendid shooting. The London team—supplied by the South London Rifle Club, of which Lord Wolseley is president—included two Queen's Silver Medallists (Private C. F. Lowe and Colour-Sergeant W. H. Smith), and the Midland team was also well represented. The weather was fine, and the shooting, in the usual military positions, at 200, 500, and 600 yards, seven shots at each distance, was carried out under generally good atmospherical conditions. The teams were led, for London, by Mr. Tuke, and, for Birmingham, by Major Lockyer. London won the match by 24 points—921 as against 897. Of the 210 rounds fired by the London team, 114 were bull's-eyes, 73 inners, 15 magpies, 7 outers, and 1 miss; and for Birmingham, 105 bull's-eyes, 72 inners, 18 magpies, and 15 outers. The following are the scores, which show the splendid character of the shooting:

BREWERS' EXHIBITION.—A private view of the tenth annual exhibition of appliances appertaining to brewing, distilling, the wine and spirit trade, and mineral water manufacture, located at the Agricultural Hall, took place on Saturday. About 400 exhibitors have entered. A feature of interest is expected to centre in the visit of Continental brewers, who are said to be keenly alive to the importance of the show. At the Brewers' Congress, to be held during the week, the papers to be read and discussed are of a commercial and business-like character, including the questions of "the licensing tribunals of the future," "the consolidation of the licensing Acts," and "trade organisation." Various prize competitions have been arranged, both in respect to malt liquor and mineral waters.

INSURANCE FRAUDS IN BELFAST.—Robert Dunlop and James Speers Orr were indicted at the Wicklow Assizes, on Saturday, for forgery and fraud in connection with the agency of the Equitable Insurance Company of New York. On Nov. 12 the London branch issued a provisional policy for £200 on the life of one Joseph Wilson. The man died on Dec. 20 following from heart disease and dropsy, and three days afterwards the prisoners proceeded to realise the insurance. It was shown that Orr had tampered with the doctor's certificate of death. Eventually Orr withdrew his plea of not guilty, and counsel for Dunlop addressed the jury, contending that he had been merely a dupe of his fellow-prisoner. The jury, however, found Dunlop guilty. He was sentenced to nine months' and Orr to six months' hard labour.

PARIS FASHIONS.

[FROM A CORRESPONDENT.]

Fate has been kind to the marchand de nouveautés. It has timed the advent of winterly weather exactly so as to coincide with the exhibitions of winter goods that always take place early in October, instead of allowing them to forestall the season as so often happens, thrusting into our notice warm raiment before we are ready for it, and taking the gloss off the novelties. The feminine world has not been merely "looking round," it has been shopping with a vengeance during the last ten days, and when the cashiers come to balancing the books in the evening the array of figures must be stupendous and gladden the hearts of the proprietors. Perhaps paterfamilias is not quite so pleased when he is called upon to settle the bills; but then he is assured that every article purchased is a dead bargain, and what more can he wish for?

Certainly there are lots of wonderfully cheap things to be had, and they are not only cheap but pretty also. Parisians always go in largely for ready-made skirts, now sold in a great variety of styles by the marchands de nouveautés. They may be purchased in fancy woollen for something less than a 20 franc piece, and for as many times that again as you may choose. Those simplest and most reasonable are generally striped or checked, made up of four breadths (double width) and gathered to the waistband at the back, and in many runnings in front, so that the bodice or jacket shall set the more closely to the figure. A wide watered sash bowed up on one side gives a natty appearance to this skirt which it might otherwise lack. It is wonderful what a few yards of ribbon will do. Similar skirts are to be had, around which a broad fringed scarf of cashmere is knotted. Jerseys are generally worn with skirts of this description, and here again a considerable reduction of price is manifest. French wove jerseys require no high dark bodice underneath, the stockingette of which they are made being quite opaque. At this time of the year it is best to choose them thick, and garnished on the inner side with a rough pile, if warmth is to be considered. But some of the thinner and finely wove jerseys wear quite as long; it is with them as with shoe-leather, durability is not to be measured only by the thickness. There are not more than three or four qualities, some of the drapers only keep two kinds, and the variations of price depend entirely on the trimming. The most approved elastic bodices are ornamented in a military fashion down the front with cords arranged after the manner of brandebourgs—which give width to the figure—and have the cuffs decorated to correspond, simplicity, backed up by economy, contenting itself with a bordering of plain mohair braid. On a former occasion I have advocated the addition of a few whalebones and a waistband sewn underneath, and the importance of this must not be overlooked; it is in such small details that you recognise a really well-dressed woman. A jersey bien baleiné, and kept in its place by a ruban de taille—to borrow two expressions from the vocabulary of the Parisian dressmaker—is the best possible bodice for every-day wear. It will look tidy and nice till the last, and will save a good dress-bodice in the course of the winter. None other should be worn under the long mantle or ulster. It used often to be necessary to shorten the shoulder seam by raising the sleeve, but they are cut better than they were formerly, and, save in the case of the cheapest of jerseys, this is no longer necessary. Very elegant elastic bodices for home are to be had braided in vermicelli scrolls, arranged in stripes—a method that has the advantage of stretching without pulling the pattern out of shape. The braiding is black, but the foundation may be coloured, and rather light, too, such shades as eucalyptus green and claret having a very pretty appearance. They are worn with any kind of black skirt.

Silk pekins—that is to say, stripe faille and velvet, reps and satin—are made up into gathered skirts also, and completed by a girdle of silken cord. These, too, are to be had dans les prix doux—say two guineas, which is not ruinous. Skirts of serge or merveilleux, with the front breadths pleated accordeon fashion and the back ones mounted in folds, are likewise among the novelties. Those in lady's cloth have generally an ornamental band, either used to decorate the hem of the tablier—the back portion being plain—or to serve as panels. They are sold with the requisite amount of material for a bodice, and a supplement of narrower bands or decorative collar and cuffs for the trimming thereof.

The absence of tunics is a marked characteristic of most of the ready-made skirts this season; neither are they draped, nor is the vertical direction of the folds in any way interfered with. For one reason, they are made to wear with long mantles—ample garments which would not look at all well over voluminous skirts. A very favourite shape for these mantles is one with side pieces forming the sleeves or rather a cover for the arms, falling over closed fronts pleated from the throat. The back fits neatly into the figure at the waist. They are made in serge with watered silk facings, and in fancy cloth trimmed with velvet. There are various ways of fastening. Sometimes buttons are used, now buckles or clasps, or again ribbons may be tied at the throat and waist. Mantles of a more expensive and dressy description are made up in the same way of matelassé or ottoman, not bordered with fur, but furnished with a boa that is sewn round the collar of the mantle and then allowed to hang loosely. There is a perfect furore for boas of all sorts; almost every woman you meet is wearing one from the humble grisette to madame in her victoria. They differ only in length and quality. The latest production of the milliner is a felt hat with a feather boa twisted round the crown, the ends of which are fastened with a bow of ribbon under the chin. Freshness and novelty are given to the short plush visite by the addition of a boa often chosen of a much lighter colour to that of the mantle. Frenchwomen, who can make a dress allowance go farther than most, patronise sealskin plush largely. It has many advantages; it requires next to no trimming, is sufficiently dressy for paying calls, will harmonise with almost any coloured gown, and, above all, wears extremely well. Long mantles, visites, and jackets are made of it. If a wrap to be worn at all times, and in all weathers, is contemplated, the woollen plush should be chosen, but that of silk is lighter and prettier. Sealskin plush jackets are made with tight-fitting backs and loose fronts—that is to say, fronts resting smoothly over the bust, but not fashioned to the figure by means of darts. There is also the sealskin plush Souvaroff collar, and a pelerine made of woven Astrachan, with a seam across the shoulders; both articles come well within the limits of a slender purse.

The redingote is vulgarised—I use the word in its broadest sense—and is also to be found ready-made, and hardly dearer than an ordinary mantle, from which it differs principally in the form of the sleeves, that are coat-shaped, rather wide and easy. The great difference between the redingotes prepared for the winter and those that were worn last spring is that they are completely closed in front; the latter, showing a certain expanse of under-skirt, are still maintained, it is true, but as part of a costume, not as a separate outer-garment. Fewer black cloth redingotes are seen, the style is reserved more especially for plain, coloured, and fancy cloths. Young girls are wearing them in striped Limousine cloth, crossed in front and fastened with large metal buttons, a plain officer collar of deep-hued velvet round the throat, and deep oblong pocket flaps on the hips also secured by buttons. Redingotes must be fashioned closely to the shape of the figure, and a good deal of extra width of skirt is plaited in at each of the back seams. In some cases actual prettiness is sacrificed to novelty or the rage for eccentricity, and a triple shoulder cape is added, or a second, belt-shaped fluted sleeve is sewn into the arm-hole above the normal coat-sleeve, which is turned back with a narrow cuff at the wrist.

Other redingotes affect the pelisse form, and as the bodice pieces are not necessarily cut in one with those of the basques or skirt—a girdle or sash concealing the seams which join the upper and lower portions—amateurs will find them more easy to treat with success. A comfortable every-day coat is that in diagonale-de-laine, with pleated centre-pieces for the back and front of the bodice, framed in by bands of watered silk or plush, and plain skirt—save for a fold laid underneath the edge—and folded belt. If the belt is sewn in at the side seams the backs must be cut in one with the basque. The long double-breasted coat or pelisse may also be an extremely smart garment in figured cloth, for instance, the over-side trimmed with a graduated band of Astrachan, starting from the right shoulder seam, getting narrower as it approaches the waist on the left, and widening out again towards the hem of the skirt. A curved belt is set lower than the waist, and fastened at the side with a handsome clasp.

As I have said, the sleeve is the principal line of demarcation between the mantle and the redingote. The former may be close-fitting, and one side may be crossed diagonally over the other; but if it has wide pagoda or dolman sleeves it is a grande visite, though not an atom of the gown worn underneath is displayed. More frequently than not, however, it has regular visite sleeves—that is to say, they make part of the side pieces and are more or less sewn in to the seams. Combinations of two materials—such as velvet and faille, plush and peau-de-soie—make up very handsome grande visites, without the addition of fur or passementerie. Black-velvet mantles are once more fashionable. I have seen them made like a redingote at the back, and with long, pointed sleeves falling to the hem of the skirt; the collar, epaulets, and points for the sleeve-tips in jet passementerie, and a beaded girdle sewn to the side-seams and tied loosely in front, with pendant ends.

It is curious to note the extraordinary similarity there is between the elegant robes-de-chambres and the long coats and mantles worn out of doors. Nothing would be easier than to transform one into the other. Few, if any, robes-de-chambres are now made with trains, the fronts hang flat like the basques of a coat, and the fulness behind is pleated into the seams in the same way. In ordering a smart redingote or grande visite the ultimate possibility of converting it into a gown for home wear may be kept in view; and, if the price seems a somewhat long one to pay for a garment out of which it would be difficult to obtain an adequate amount of wear in its original shape, the suggestion will help to still the small voice of conscience.

BRISTOL, SATURDAY.

In the matter of record, little remains to be said of this festival. The "Messiah" was performed yesterday morning as a "wind up," the solos being sung by Miss Anna Williams, Madame Patey, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Worlock, and Mr. Santley, and all went on to the satisfaction of the large audience which Handel's masterpiece usually attracts. Comment in detail would be superfluous, and it may prove much more profitable to make some general remarks upon the results of the festival and the conditions that may have influenced them.

I quite see that a stranger to Bristol can only deal under disadvantages with subjects requiring local knowledge, and, as far as this is true in the present case, it may be proper for me to speak with diffidence. But even a stranger can make himself acquainted with facts, and, perhaps, arrive at an independent and impartial opinion more easily than is possible to others who are concerned in them. Anyhow, there can arise no question about my first statement—the festival just concluded has not been a popular and pecuniary success. I have seen no official figures that enable a comparison to be made with previous occasions, but the many empty seats at nearly all the performances have spoken on this subject with a convincing eloquence peculiar to themselves. From an artistic point of view, the committee and their friends see cause for nothing but congratulation, in which I heartily join, but the attendance figures have an ugly appearance, and call for serious thought. In this connection there is no reason whatever for scolding the Bristol people, holding them up as indifferent to the cause of good music, and prophesying the downfall of their festival. Language of this sort cannot be justified if based upon experience of a single occasion only, and in order to arrive at a right estimate of facts we must take a larger field of view. Having done this, I contend that, however regrettable the attitude of the public during the present week, Bristolians have a right to be proud of the musical work done during the last fifteen years. We must remember that the festivals held here are on the largest scale; that they command the services of the best artists, and entail a very heavy expenditure. In these respects there is not much to choose between the festival at Bristol and those of Birmingham and Leeds. Mark, however, the difference in other respects—a difference enormously to the disadvantage of the Western city. Take the point of population. Birmingham and the districts communicating with it by rail within a radius of twenty miles contain a population of 1,200,000, and at Leeds, within a similar compass, there are near upon a million souls; whereas Bristol is far behind with 380,000 only. By no means, however, do these figures put the whole case. The Birmingham and Leeds districts are prosperous and wealthy, while the mass of the people, by virtue of long-enjoyed advantages, have more or less of artistic sympathy and taste. Bristol, on the other hand, can hardly be called flourishing or rich, and the characteristics of the surrounding population differ in no way from those of purely agricultural districts all the country over. Yet, in spite of these drawbacks, Bristol has for fifteen years maintained a first-class triennial festival, given an annual series of concerts, and sustained educational classes without, in all that time, having to call upon the guarantors for more than the trifling sum of two and a half guineas each. These are simple facts, and they speak for themselves. They speak, also, for Bristol, and supply a sufficient refutation of any charges brought against the city on the score of indifference to the particular art concerned. There still remains the discouraging fact that the festival which closed yesterday met with inadequate support. How is it to be explained and remedied? Here the necessity for intimate local knowledge makes itself felt, and I, for one, have not the smallest right to deliver an opinion ex cathedrâ. Nor is there, on the other hand, reason for absolute silence, because I am informed that, in musical matters, and particularly with regard to the festival, Bristol is "a house divided against itself." One section adheres to the present system, which brings into the city Sir Charles Hallé and his Manchester orchestra; the other vigorously contends that the musical direction should be in the hands of Mr. George Riseley, organist of the cathedral, under whom local orchestral talent, now shut out, would be let in. Whether the plan at present followed, or that suggested, is the best I am not qualified to say, knowing nothing of Mr. Riseley's claims as a conductor. Nor is this question very much to the point; the chief consideration being that the musical population of the city are sharply divided on a vital matter, and that party feeling runs high, as, indeed, was pretty clearly shown by the special applause which greeted Mr. Riseley when he took his seat at the organ on Thursday morning. In view of this split, advice from outside would be impertinent; it is, however, matter for regret, even by strangers, that some modus operandi cannot be agreed upon, to bring together all energies in a common cause. Surely, if there exist a real desire for union and consequent strength, this is possible. Turning to another point, it seems clear that the festival is handicapped by the hall in which the performances now take place. I have said this before, and some people here exclaim, with the glee of those upon whom a new absurdity has dawned, "If the present building cannot be filled, how preposterous to erect a larger one!" True, if the conditions in other respects remained equal. Is there really a need to explain to these wise folk that at Colston Hall each seat costs the committee a sum (I am told nine shillings and a fraction) so large that the charge for admission becomes prohibitive to a considerable section of music-lovers? When the lowest price for an unsecured place is three half-crowns, it must be obvious that by far the larger part of the community remains shut out. Yet the expenses cannot be reduced without loss of efficiency. Given a larger hall, the charges to the public could be lowered, and considerable sections of the community be "tapped," while the expenses need not appreciably increase. I must apologise for the apparent necessity to explain in so many words what most people are able to understand without help. Other reasons, of a nature more intimately connected with musical effect, might be urged in favour of a new "local habitation" for the festival; but the chief weakness of the institution, as regards its triennial gathering, lies in the fact that it appeals only to a limited number of comparatively well-to-do persons. This may work no harm in Leeds or Birmingham, where wealth abounds, but a festival in Bristol should have a broader basis, and rest upon the support of the entire community.

THE PORTMAN ROOMS.

On Saturday night the first of a series of "Bohemian Subscription Smoking Concerts" was held at the above commodious rooms. For the entertainment of the company assembled a programme of a somewhat mixed character had been prepared. In it pieces by composers such as Rubinstein and Gounod were to be seen in combination with a burlesque lecture, a humorous sketch, a comic song, and a séance in magic. Amongst the performers who gave vocal importance to the concert Mr. Donnell Balfe should be named as the most distinguished. Mr. Cammeyer's zither-banjo solos were loudly applauded, and the playing of the Belgravian Orchestra, consisting of ten instrumentalists, was duly appreciated. Perhaps the director will put forward on the next occasion a programme of a more artistic description. Should he not, the selection might, for all that, be by some of the subscribers considered of a kind equal to meet the requirements of a social gathering. As it is announced that the concerts are given in aid of the King's College Hospital, their pecuniary success will be looked upon with general satisfaction.

THE BEAUTY SHOW AT SPA.—It is a noteworthy fact that the Guadaloupe young lady who secured the suffrages of the judges at the recent Beauty Show did not achieve success through the regularity of her features. Her mouth, nose, and eyes, beautiful though they were, could not compare with the many who came far below her in the competition; but it was her incomparable complexion that won her the pride of place. Such spotless purity of skin as hers is possessed by few, but it is a recognised fact that a regular use of Rowland's Kalydor on ordinary faces will bring about equally good results. For preventing and removing freckles, tan, redness, and roughness of the skin in cold and damp weather its virtues are unsurpassed. Sold everywhere in 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. bottles. Ask for Rowland's Kalydor.—[ADVT.]

Sealskin Garments and Ladies' Furs at half-price. Alaska sealskin Battenbergs, £4, £5, and £6 each; sealskin paletots, from £8, half-price. Gents' fur-lined coats, £5 and £8. An immense quantity of boas and all kinds of furs, carriage and hearth rugs, ladies' fur-lined cloaks, to be sold regardless of cost.—Phillips' City Fur Warehouse, 32, 33, Newgate-st., our only address.—[ADVT.]

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.

Shakespeare even in its most modern dress appears to have a soothing effect on an audience. A house crowded in every corner on Saturday night received the last revival of "As You Like It" with a respectful and courteous attention that must have been extremely gratifying to the management. There was not the slightest sound or suspicion of a disturbance, no jeer or gibe ruffled the serenity of the uneventful evening, no note of objection or ribaldry was heard; and, although the performers, for some reason best known to themselves, took this enchanting comedy at a funereal pace, though some careless person had pulled out the stopper and allowed all the perfume of Shakespeare's poetry to evaporate, though the love scenes were wooden and unimaginative, and, owing to the absence of all light and gaiety and sparkle, the gloomy entertainment dragged its slow length along up to within a few minutes of midnight, as much serious and rapt attention was given to the play as in the old days of Shakespeare at Sadler's Wells. This is as it should be. Fair play was given to every one concerned in the revival, and a dismal Touchstone, a comic and cynical Orlando, a dull and stolid Audrey, a scheme of costume wholly unbecoming, and a set of scenic illustrations modern to a fault never once tempted the spectators into any undue ebullitions of merriment or interlocutory comment.

In the first place, Mr. John Lancaster, the proprietor and director, had managed to make all his friends extremely comfortable. For the first time for many years, a new theatre was opened without a grumble. The paint was dry and the playhouse was warm and well ventilated. Every one had elbow-room. The pit was pronounced to be one of the best in London, the passages, foyers, refreshment-rooms, and staircases were wide and spacious, the good things dispensed during the intervals were pronounced satisfactory, and the public were quick to perceive an intention to serve them and a sound business capacity which are very welcome. Mr. Phipps can certainly be congratulated on his last new theatre. Whether Shakespeare succeeds there or not, or whatever may be the fortune of this last revival, it is certain that the Shaftesbury will be always in demand as a theatre where pretty, romantic, or spectacular plays can be presented handsomely and well. The acoustic properties must not be hastily condemned on the strength of Saturday night's experience. It is true that a good half of the performers were absolutely inaudible. Muffled sounds were emitted from their closed teeth and lips. They seemed to take a positive pride in concealing the text in their beards or their bosoms. But then, on the other hand, Miss Wallis, Mr. Arthur Stirling, and Mr. Forbes Robertson gave every line of the text its proper value, thereby showing that experience teaches that the actor ought to be heard as well as seen. This is not the theory of the modern young lady and gentleman. They cultivate the art of indistinctness to an extent that is almost ludicrous, and one wonders of what value a stage director can be who permits rehearsal after rehearsal to go on with a perpetuation of the same inarticulate and mumbling sounds. What would be thought of a conductor who did not insist on his chorus opening the mouth? The delight of the modern Shakespearian student is to speak with bouche fermée: who can wonder that in such circumstances poor Shakespeare is voted dull and tedious when his best lines are mangled, and his most beautiful thoughts are smothered?

The obvious fault of this revival is that it has had no imaginative mind to direct it. Where it is not desperately dull it is tediously commonplace. No attempt has been made to instil into it lightness or charm, or to preserve its fragrance and exquisite ideality. Mr. Glindoni has designed his costumes with care, and probably from his point of view they are consistent, but when not positively ugly they dull and deaden the scene. It may be incorrect, but somehow or other we associate this exquisitely fanciful pastoral with spring-time, primroses, blue hyacinths, and the "uncrumpling fern," with the first wild note of the song-bird, with, as Shakespeare puts it in this very play, with the "lover and his lass" passing "o'er the green corn-fields, with the spring-time, the only pretty ring-time, When birds doing, hey ding a ding ding, Sweet lovers love the spring." This is the poetic spirit and tone of "As You Like It." It has nothing to do with melancholy, or yellowy forests, or the sadness of autumn or fallen leaves. Rosalind and Orlando should pass over daisies, not ankle-deep in decay. Where Mr. Henry Emden is not depressing in colour and atmosphere he is architecturally modern. His garden of the Duke's Palace is as heavy as the pleasure ground of Mariana in the moated grange; his cottage from which old Adam drags his weary bones might be a Norman Shaw lodge to a brand-new Chislehurst mansion. Granted this depressing scheme of scenery, these autumn tints, this settled melancholy, the designer of costumes was bound to follow suit. The comic Orlando whittles his stick in a buff-coloured jerkin, and the melancholy Jaques philosophises in a funereal garb. From first to last the stage is pervaded with an atmosphere of gloom. The text suggests gaiety, fancy, exhilaration, imagination; the scene-painter and decorator can only see in it a cry of anguish and a note of despair. If ever there was a play that required the imaginative painter who knows by heart our woodland ways, our lovely English landscapes, our flowered dells, our leafy knolls, it is "As You Like It." But by some strange caprice we are escorted to the Black Forest. How can Rosalind or Orlando play at lovemaking, or feel the freshness of life's spring-time, and carol nonsense with their "hey and a ho or a hey nonino," when all nature is weeping at the fall of the leaf?

Miss Wallis, if not a very ideal or imaginative Rosalind—what experienced actress ever can be, save Ellen Terry, who still refuses to play the part?—is, at least, a very intelligent and painstaking one. She speaks well, she has thoroughly studied and mastered the character, and had she been better supported would have appeared to far greater advantage. Her best scenes were not with Orlando at all, but with Celia, and with Phoebe and Silvius. For, strange to say, the Orlando of Mr. Forbes Robertson was the one serious and striking disappointment of the revival. Here we have one of the most imaginative and poetic actors on the stage, with a beautiful voice, a winning manner, and a sensitive style, positively making fun of this charming creation. The Orlando was never for an instant in love; he did not appear to know the meaning of the word; and throughout he treated Rosalind to the cynical disdain he might have shown to an Audrey or a kitchen wench. Few English actors can make love on the stage or look romantic; but here is one who can do both, and, from some unexplained cause, refuses to do either. The best sound Shakespearian performance all round was the Jaques of Mr. Arthur Stirling. He pitched his voice a little low at first, but soon recovered himself, and delivered the Seven Ages speech with elocutionary grace and excellent effect. Would that he had more imitators! Mr. William Farren as Old Adam and Mr. Mackintosh as Touchstone were, strange to say, both ineffective. No pathos came from the one or humour from the other; and it is a long time since Old Adam did not wring a tear or Touchstone a laugh. But it was a consistently melancholy evening. Even Audrey, in the person of Mrs. Saker, seemed frightened of her uncouthness and her munched apple. She did not win a smile. Miss Annie Rose made a pretty Celia, and was always intelligent, if not imaginative; and Phoebe found a clever representative in Miss Kate Fayne, who, like many more, was hampered by a hideous and needlessly inappropriate dress. What, for instance, could poor Silvius do, or how could he be romantic, bunched up and padded out in a dress that might have belonged to his shepherd great-grandfather? Phoebe and Silvius should have been dressed after the ideal swains and maidens in George Mason's pictures. Instead of that, they were padded and stuffed out so as to represent the modern shepherds and shepherdesses of the Wiltshire downs—excellent peasants, no doubt, but wholly uninteresting. The music that united the Shakespearian "Blow, blow, thou winter wind" and the cheery "What shall he have that killed the deer?" with "Hail, smiling morn" was entrusted to a lusty chorus and a capable singer, Mr. Seymour Jackson, and when the music was in full swing these were the most enlivening moments of the play.

The serious lesson to be learned from this revival is that Shakespeare, on the modern stage, is comparatively useless unless the selected plays are directed by a scholar's mind and executed by those gifted with strong artistic instinct. Shakespearian plays have proved remunerative under Phelps, Charles Kean, and Irving. They failed when "put on," as it is called, by Chatterton, which means when handed over to the tender mercies of those who do not profess to be students, and only by a stretch of courtesy can be called artists.

At the Queen's County Quarter Sessions on Saturday, Lord Lansdowne obtained forty ejectment decrees against his Luggacurran tenants.

The death-rate for the borough of Harwich (which includes the neighbouring watering-place of Dovercourt) for the third quarter of this year was 7·04 per 1,000, there being no deaths recorded from zymotic diseases. In 1886 the rate per 1,000 was 6·06 for the fourth quarter of that year.

THE QUEEN'S PRIZE WINNER.—On Saturday a dinner was given at the Queen's Hall, James-street, Buckingham-gate, by the I Company of the Queen's Westminster Volunteers, to celebrate the winning of the Queen's Prize by Sergeant Fulton, a member of that company. The chair was taken by Major Payne, captain of the company, who was supported by Colonel Lynch and Colonel Comerford. There were also present Colonel Scrivener, Major Starkie, Captain Brodie (adjutant), Lieutenants Kingdon, Moore, and Faux, Mr. Hooper, Mr. Debenham, and a number of honorary members of the company. Colonel Howard Vincent, C.B., M.P., commanding the regiment, and Colonel Bushby, late commandant, were, through indisposition, unavoidably absent.

THE ADMIRALTY.—Lord Charles Beresford writes as follows to a correspondent: "I am delighted with the First Lord of the Admiralty's speech at Glasgow. It allows candidly that the statements made lately by the so-called 'alarmists' are all true and sound in argument. The latter end of his speech is quite excellent, particularly where he says: 'Now the Board are going to find out practically and definitely what are the requirements of the country for national defence first, and then submit a plan or proposal for the acceptance of Parliament and the people.' It was because they would not do that before that I resigned. If the Government carry out the proposals embodied in the First Lord's statesmanlike speech we may be very hopeful for the future."

The electric light, in its vast superiority to gas and all other forms of artificial light, is an apt illustration of the position which Grant's Morella Cherry Brandy maintains in comparison with all other liqueurs, in its perfection of rich fruity flavour. ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF ENGLAND.—The entries for the prizes for hops offered by the Royal Agricultural Society, in connection with its Jubilee meeting in Windsor Great Park next June, will close on Thursday, Nov. 1. A first prize of £20 and a second of £10 are offered for hops from each of the following districts: East Kent, Mid-Kent, Weald of Kent, Hants or Surrey, Hereford or Worcester, Sussex. Only those hops grown in the year 1888 are eligible for exhibition. The pockets entered for competition must be sent to the show intact, except that they may have been previously sampled in the ordinary way for trade purposes. The samples for the judges will be taken in the show-yard in the presence of the steward. All pockets should be marked in the usual manner.

REMARKABLE VOYAGE IN THE CHANNEL.—A small open coast fishing boat which was anchored off Camia, a fishing village nine miles from Boulogne, broke from her moorings at seven o'clock on Tuesday evening last. The only person on board was an old French fisherman, named Charles Caffier, the other members of the crew being on shore. The boat drifted to sea, and driven by an easterly wind reached Hastings on Saturday afternoon, the journey having occupied four nights and three and a half days. There was no food on board. Caffier hoisted a piece of rag to a pole as a signal of distress, but failed to obtain assistance, although he says he passed several vessels, one being a steamer, which came close to him. During most of the time the sea was rough, and at nights he suffered very much from cold. On Friday night, believing he was about to die, he wrapped himself up in a sail. On landing a gentleman living on the Grand-parade, St. Leonards, supplied the poor fellow with food, which was eagerly devoured. He was assisted by the coastguards and the agent of the Shipwrecked Mariners' Association, and in the evening was sent off by train to Folkestone, en route to Boulogne.

ANOTHER RUPTURE SUFFERER COMPLETELY CURED BY HARNESS' NEW HERNIA APPLIANCE AND TREATMENT.—Mr. Robert Ford, Cowleigh-road, North Malvern, writes, Oct. 9, 1888: "In May last I placed myself under your treatment for rupture, and after four months' trial of your new appliance I may now safely say that I am completely cured. My advice to those who suffer in a similar way is to place themselves at once under your care. It will always be a very great pleasure to me to answer any inquiries with respect to my case and your treatment." Sufferers may save themselves a lifetime of torture by adopting this the only reliable treatment. Examination free by an experienced and skilful surgeon at Harness' Electropathic Establishment, 52, Oxford-street, London, W. (corner of Rathbone-place).—[ADVT.]

LORD GRANVILLE IN LIVERPOOL.

On Saturday, Earl Granville was the guest of the Liverpool Reform Club. In responding to the toast of his health, he reviewed the political situation. With regard to the self-glorification in which members of the Government were indulging, the noble Lord said the principle of the Local Government Act had really been contended for by the Liberals for many years; and as to the conversion of Consols, Mr. Goschen had been greatly aided by the strongest houses in the City. Having briefly alluded to the proceedings connected with the passing of the Parnell Commission Bill in the House of Lords, Earl Granville said that Ireland, above all other topics, was the one theme of political discussion which created the greatest interest at the present moment. It had been said that Mr. Gladstone had no policy, whilst the policy of the Government was known to the whole world. The principle of Mr. Gladstone's Bill had been described. After requiring the creation of a legislative body at Dublin, it attached certain conditions to its establishment. The first was the unity of the Empire, and that the security and welfare of the whole must be held to be superior to that of any part. Another condition was to be perfect political equality in the three countries; another, that there should be a redistribution of the financial burdens; another, that there must be a reasonable safeguard; and the fifth that there must be a plan promising a real settlement of the Irish question. Since that time Mr. Gladstone had, in the clearest manner possible, declared his adhesion to the principle of that bill, but had expressed his perfect readiness to consider all reasonable amendments which seemed to be improvements. Mr. Gladstone had, upon the point of the Irish representation at Westminster, expressed his willingness to yield to what seemed to be the general feeling. Was Mr. Gladstone, not now in office, bound to present a bill for the purpose of amusing his opponents and creating a cockshy for them to throw at? But what of the assertions of the Government that they possessed an Irish policy? He would like to be authoritatively informed whether their policy was that of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach or of Mr. Balfour, of Lord Hartington or Mr. Chamberlain; whether it was in accordance with the Newport speech of Lord Salisbury, or the subsequent declaration as to "twenty years of resolute government," with the point reserved at the end of that time to consider whether or not any reform in the Irish Government should take place. (Cheers.) Although he wished to speak with great hesitation upon the odious subject of Mr. Mandeville's imprisonment and death, the case had excited violent sentiment in the country. The serious part of the business was that statements founded upon public reports of evidence taken in an open court of justice, after being sifted by cross-examination of hostile counsel, were attempted to be entirely put aside by a gentleman who had remained in Scotland himself, and had received certain reports to pick and choose from. He (Lord Granville) had seen something of espionage, and he believed, however necessary in critical cases in Ireland that system might be, the Government had been misled by the secret reports which it had received. Mr. Dillon had fortunately been released, and it was a matter for the greatest possible congratulation to the Government that they were able to release him, for he was certain that if Mr. Dillon had died in prison the life of the Government after that death would have been a very short one indeed. (Hear, hear.) He (Lord Granville) denied the assertion that the Liberal leaders encouraged the breaking of the laws. They wished the battle to be fought in a strictly constitutional way; but it must be remembered that the Irish did not regard the laws as so binding as we in this country, inasmuch as they felt them to be laws forced upon them by others. Personally, concluded Earl Granville, he had no doubt as to the result of the contest. He was much encouraged by what he had seen that evening. They were determined to fight it out. (Cheers.) They had backed Home Rule against coercion, because coercion was one of the hideous examples of the rotten system which now existed, and their real determination was, by the help of the whole people of Great Britain, to obtain for the Irish people the adoption of the old Liberal principle that you cannot govern a free people against their own will. (Cheers.)

Our correspondent telegraphs: "Another mass meeting of the inhabitants of Aberdeen was held on Saturday night, at which an indignant protest was entered against the action of the Town Council in offering the freedom of the City to Mr. Goschen in face of the declared opposition of the artisans. A resolution was passed strongly recommending the electors to oust the Unionist members of the Council from their seats at the approaching municipal elections. Mr. Goschen was thanked for his refusal to accept the freedom, by which means the Town Council had been extricated from a hopeless muddle."

Mr. Chaplin, M.P., speaking at Donington, Lincolnshire, on Saturday night, denied that the Allotments Act was a failure, for it had led to the provision of a great number of allotments by voluntary means. As to Ireland, he declared the condition of the country was greatly improved, due to the admirable government of Mr. Balfour, who, in spite of the libellous abuse showered upon him, was one of the most kind-hearted and honourable of Englishmen. Only one thing was wanted to make Ireland quiet—namely, that the leader of the Separatist party and his friends would cease their agitation, and, if possible, for a little while leave Ireland alone.

Mr. Shaw-Lefevre, who spoke at Llangollen on Saturday evening, said he desired particularly to impress upon the English people the absolute connection of nearly every case under the Crimes Act with the land question. The disputes between landlord and tenant arose from the arrears difficulty, and they would find that wherever the landlord conceded adequate remissions of rent, or where he had given way to the Plan of Campaign, there had been no prosecutions under the Crimes Act.

Mr. John O'Connor, M.P., addressed a meeting at Merthyr on Saturday night in support of the candidature of Mr. Foulkes Griffiths, remarking that at last the Parnellites had a commission, and their enemies would be very glad now to retire from it. But they had pinned them to it, and they would keep them there.

THE MINERS' STRIKE.

A conference of Derbyshire Miners' delegates, representing sixty-two collieries, was held at Chesterfield, on Saturday, at which it was reported that 12,000 notices had already been handed in throughout the country. A resolution was unanimously passed pledging the men to bring out their tools when the notices terminated unless an advance in wages of ten per cent. be unconditionally granted.

In an interview with the officials of the Miners' Association at Barnsley on Saturday afternoon, Mr. B. Pickard, M.P., the secretary, stated that the owners of the Snydale and Pontefract Collieries had unconditionally given the 10 per cent. advance. The officials state that the resolutions adopted by the Manchester Conference form the basis of the agitation, and seeing that the coalowners in West Lancashire, North Wales, Staffordshire, and some parts of Yorkshire have already given the advance, they have no alternative but to decline the offer of arbitration on the terms offered by the coalowners in the resolution passed at their meeting in Sheffield. The collieries where the 10 per cent. has been conceded are not held by lease owners, and employ no great number of men. Several thousand notices expire on Wednesday next, and Thursday will see the vast majority of the miners in the West Riding on strike.

The Forest of Dean colliers, who have already received 5 per cent. advance, and who were anticipating a further rise on the 1st prox. of 2½ per cent., are now urging a full 5 per cent. addition to their wages. Trade is unprecedentedly good, and prospects are encouraging. The iron ore miners are expecting an immediate advance of 5 per cent.

Owing to the expected strike in the Yorkshire coalfield, Durham household coals have been recently in much greater demand for shipment to London. Two or three shillings per ton more than the usual price has sometimes been paid, and it has been resolved that from Monday there were will be an advance of 1s per ton in Durham "households" for the inland trade. If the strike occurs a further rise will take place.

The colliers employed at Sandwell Park, West Bromwich, which is the largest colliery in South Staffordshire, held a conference on Saturday afternoon with the managers. It was explained that 10 per cent. advance could not be given, owing to the resolution passed at the masters' meeting; but no doubt it would be conceded before next Saturday, and they were advised to go to work. The men afterwards resolved unanimously to continue the strike until the employers granted the 10 per cent. rise.

DOVER.—Bar. 30·28, rising; wind E., light; weather fine; sea smooth; steamers had good passages.

Generally fair weather is still indicated.

A USEFUL HINT.—If British housekeepers, instead of purchasing the commonest of common matches, because they are low priced and thought to be cheap, would use none but matches bearing Bryant and May's name, they would not only get the best value for their money, but would enable Bryant and May to pay thousands of pounds more weekly in wages; and in that way the British housekeepers would be doing real good to the working classes of the East-end of London.—[ADVERTISEMENT.]

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless; it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d. per bottle.—[ADVERTISEMENT.]

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MARYLEBONE.—SMART CHASE AFTER THIEVES.—James Holland, of 170, Carlton-road, Kilburn, a labourer, was charged with stealing a quantity of old lead pipes, the property of a person unknown.—Detective Langford, X Division, said he was in Salisbury-road, Kilburn, about four o'clock on Friday afternoon, and saw prisoner and two others standing near the door of No. 57. He watched, and saw one of the men open the street door with a key, and they all went inside and bolted the door. He kept observation for twenty minutes, when the accused came out and put some lead down in one corner of the area. One of the other men also brought out some lead. Witness secured the assistance of a uniform officer and a postman, and, having stationed them in different positions, he forced a basement window and got into the house. The prisoner and the others at once hurried up the stairs on to the roof, and ran across the roofs of the adjoining houses. He pursued them, and they all got into the second-floor window of No. 40. Holland made his way out at the street door and was captured by the postman. Witness went back after the other men, but fell down the staircase. The other men escaped out of the house, and made their way across the London and North-Western Railway into Albert-road, where witness lost sight of them. He went back to the house, where he found a quantity of old lead, beyond that already mentioned, rolled up, ready to be taken away. When told the charge the prisoner said he knew nothing about the matter. Langford is the officer who received serious injuries in a fight with a notorious burglar now in penal servitude and who, until recently, was incapacitated from duty for many months. Addressing Langford Mr. De Rutzen said he was glad to find he was well enough to be as useful as ever. He remanded the prisoner for a week.

WESTMINSTER.—TEN MONTHS MARRIED.—Chas. M. Beatty, 24, a young man living in Francis-street, Westminster, was charged on a warrant with assaulting his wife, Bertha; and James Hawkins, 36, painter, of Tufton-street, Westminster, was also charged with being concerned in the alleged outrage.—Mr. T. D. Dutton appeared for the prosecution; and Mr. G. D. Rymer for the defendants.—The prosecutrix, a young woman, who appeared in the witness-box with a baby in her arms, said she was married last Christmas, and had from the first lived most unhappily with her husband. In June last she obtained a warrant against him for throwing her downstairs and breaking one of her fingers. On that occasion she did not press the case, and he was only held to bail to keep the peace. On the night of the 18th inst., accompanied by Hawkins, he came to where she was living in Francis-street, Westminster, and attempted to remove the furniture. She resisted its removal, and her husband burst a door open, knocked her down, and kicked her in the back. She was so much injured that she could not sit down. Hawkins, like her husband, made use of most disgusting threats and caught her by the throat, half throttling her. Cross-examined the prosecutrix said that her husband stopped away from her since Saturday last. He was jealous of an old gentleman she called "Uncle." She had not had a child by the person known as "Uncle." She knew a man named Bennett, but he did not allow her anything. She was formerly a servant at his mother's place. The night of the alleged assault her husband came with Hawkins to take away forcibly some of the furniture.—Mr. Partridge: Who bought the furniture?—Complainant: We bought it together, and when we had a dispute before I pawned some of the things to pay my solicitor.—Further cross-examined complainant admitted that she shut the door in her husband's face. She had not threatened to throw vitriol over her sister and husband. She had an encounter with a woman on Saturday night last who bruised her and knocked her tooth out.—Mr. Rymer said that on another occasion he should be prepared to call witnesses to show the disgraceful conduct of the prosecutrix. Her husband intended to separate from her.—Mr. Partridge observed that, after the admissions prosecutrix had made in cross-examination, he should accept the personal recognisances of both defendants to appear on remand.

WORSHIP-STREET.—ALLEGED PRIZE FIGHT IN A CLUB.—Charles Smith, 20, described as a bookmaker, of Tenter-street, Goodman's-fields, Whitechapel, and Arthur Wilkinson, 20, fish-frier, of Winchester-street, King's-cross, were charged with being principals in a prize-fight.—Mr. H. M. Ogle appeared for the defence; Superintendent Hunt, G Division, watched the case for the police.—Inspector Joseph Cage deposed that at half-past ten o'clock on Friday night he went with a number of constables to a club called the "Morning Star," 30, East-road, City-road. It was known as a German club, the proprietor being William Kuhl. Information had been received that a prize-fight was taking place there, and, under the direction of the superintendent, the house was guarded back and front. After failing to obtain entrance, by knocking and ringing, witness passed through an adjoining house, and over its roof to that of the club, which had an outbuilding called the hall. The roof of that had a skylight, but the glass was opaque. Witness heard the word "Time" called, also a demand for "Water," and then the sound of blows. Having satisfied himself that a fight was going on, he returned to the street, and, with several constables, passed through a house from which they could reach the wall of the yard, over which the constables dropped with witness, who then went to the door of the hall. There was a great rush to get out, but it was prevented, and when witness entered he found between 200 and 300 persons in the hall. A ring made of ropes and stakes was in the centre, and the two prisoners were in the circle. Constables who had first got in had them in custody. The names and addresses of a large number of those present were taken.—The magistrate (Mr. Montagu Williams, Q.C.) asked what kind of place was this hall, and the inspector replied that it was very large, with a drinking bar at one end and a raised platform or stage at the other. A bill outside the house announced a ball, dancing to commence at 8.30. On the floor were a number of tickets giving admission to the ball for that evening. When Smith was searched at the station telegrams and letters relating to the fight were found on him. Gloves, sponges, towels, ropes, and stakes were seized. The prisoners showed extensive bruising on the chest and shoulders. Smith was the worst and was bleeding from the ear. He was also sick, and was attended by the divisional surgeon.—Cross-examined the witness said the club was confined to members, though they could invite friends. The magistrate: How do you know that?—Witness said he was told so by the proprietor. He admitted he saw nothing of the fight. There was no blood on the boxing gloves, but he considered that gloves were not being used, the sound of the blows being too loud.—Police-sergeant Gould, 30 G, deposed that he and others passed through a house and climbed eight walls to get to the garden at the back of the club in question, the hall being built on the greater part of the garden. The police had a ladder with them, which was raised against the wall of the hall. When witness was on the ladder a cry of "Police" was raised. He at once dropped over the wall and rushed to the entrance. There was a stampede to a door at the other end, and in the centre of the hall witness as he entered saw a ring of ropes and stakes and two men in the middle in fighting costume. Witness jumped into the ring and seized Wilkinson. Someone called out "Be men; it's only one, down him." A rush was made into the ring, and Wilkinson was rescued from him. He (witness) ran to the door and opened it, admitting the police. Witness pursued Wilkinson to a room at one end of the hall, and found him hiding under the table, still in fighting costume. On being arrested he said, "All right, I shan't try to get away." A man called Wilkinson a fool for not putting a coat on when, he said, the police would have missed him. The same man asked who had got the purse. The defendants, when witness entered, were not wearing boxing-gloves.—Cross-examined, he said there were boxing-gloves hanging to the stakes, but witness thought the men were fighting without. Wilkinson's hands were badly knocked about, which would not have been the case had gloves been worn.—At this point the hearing was adjourned, the magistrate ordering a remand, admitting the prisoners to bail in one surety of £75 each. He also certified for legal aid to the police in the prosecution.

WANDSWORTH.—MATRIMONIAL DIFFERENCES.—Albert Chard, a master tradesman, living at 17, Queen's-parade, Clapham Junction, was brought up on remand for assaulting his wife, Emma Chard, against whom a summons had been granted for assaulting her husband. There were also summonses against Frank and Henry Neville, the sons of Emma Chard by a former husband, for assaulting their stepfather.—Mr. John Haynes, who appeared for Albert Chard, said he was the woman's third husband. On entering the bed-room she scratched his face, and Frank held him while Henry struck him unmercifully with a dog whip about his body.—The husband corroborated the opening statement of his solicitor, and was cross-examined by Mr. George F. Bell, who defended. He denied having assaulted his wife, who was his senior by twenty years.—Mr. Bell: Is it not a fact, sir, that you married her for her money?—The Husband: Certainly not.—Mr. Bell: And have you not squandered it away in drink at every opportunity?—Witness (indignantly): No.—Mr. Bell, in addressing the magistrate on behalf of the wife, said she had been compelled to live apart from her husband in consequence of his drinking habits. On two occasions she instituted proceedings in the Divorce Court against him for a judicial separation on the ground of cruelty. He, however, begged of her to forgive him, promising to behave better, and she was persuaded to withdraw from the actions and live with him again. She had also preferred a charge against him at Clerkenwell Police-court, but in consideration of his taking the pledge he was only bound over to keep the peace. She and her sons denied assaulting the husband; all they did was to protect themselves from his violence.—The wife stated that her husband returned home in a state of intoxication and went into the drawing-room, where he lay snoring loudly. He afterwards entered the bed-room, pulled the clothes off the bed, and struck her with his fist. She had been married to him seven years, and had advanced him altogether £400 to go into business, but he had squandered it away in drink. He was in the habit of calling her most foul names.—Frank Neville said he went to his mother's assistance, when the prisoner took up an iron bar and struck him with it.—Mr. Plowden, after further investigation, dismissed all the summonses, observing that if the wife scratched her husband's face it was nothing more than he deserved. His conduct had been unwarrantable throughout, and he ordered him, for the assault on the wife, to pay a fine of £5, or one month's imprisonment, and granted her a judicial separation, with the custody of the only child of the marriage. He also ordered him to pay a fine of 40s for the assault upon Frank Neville.

Mr. John Warde, writing from Hammersmith, states that he is in no way connected with the defendant in the action of "Warburton v. Ward," recently heard at Westminster County-court.

SUPPOSED ROBBERY OF DIAMONDS.—The police authorities are in search of a man who for some few weeks carried on the business of a diamond merchant in Hatton-garden, and who it is alleged has disappeared with diamonds to the value of £7,000, which he had obtained from a number of Hatton-garden dealers on the representation that he could dispose of the goods to advantage, promising in the event of failure to return them.

EXTRACTS FROM the SUNDAY PAPERS on the Theatre and Performance:

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—The Observer says: "The house is an imposing structure, with no less than 13 exits and entrances. There is an ample pit, which the pittites last night loudly expressed their approval of. . . . The curiosity manifested by the public was shown in the rush for seats, every available place being occupied and hundreds of persons turned away from the doors. The house was enthusiastic in its approval of the players. . . . Miss Wallis was throughout accorded the honours of an old favourite, was florally testimonialised, and applauded to the echo. . . . When she appeared last night in the garden scene of the second act the audience gave her a demonstration. Cheers loud and long welcomed her. . . . After each act the audience demanded her reappearance, and loaded her with honours. Another capital impersonation was Mr. Forbes Robertson's Orlando. Mr. Robertson has never played better, and we have hardly seen a better Orlando. The selection of Mr. Mackintosh for Touchstone ensured a thoroughly artistic study of that amusing character. The melancholy Jaques of Mr. Arthur Stirling was another well-favoured assumption. His well-balanced elocution and quiet dignity gave excellent point to the railings of the good-natured cynic. No better representation of old Adam could be desired than Mr. W. Farren, who played the part with impressive effect. . . . The new theatre, equipped with everything desirable in the way of elegance, comfort, and liberal display, was launched upon public favour."

SHAFTESBURY.—The Referee says: "It is many years—we do not care to remember how many—since such a large and convenient theatre was opened to the public in central London as that which Mr. John Lancaster has built. . . . There is not a house in London more carefully planned for the safety as well as the comfort of its visitors. . . . Let us hasten to say that we have witnessed few, if any, impersonations more carefully thought out and elaborated (Miss Wallis's Rosalind). Several of the touches were admirable, the best scene being that in which Rosalind [illegible] Phebe and Silvius. . . . To-night's audience was in high good humour."

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—The Sunday Times says: "Thanks to the enterprise of Mr. John Lancaster, London can now boast another new theatre as elegant, commodious, and safe as any place of amusement in the metropolis. . . . The whole edifice, in fact, is as nearly fireproof as it is possible to make it, while the comfort of the audience has been studied in every respect, the seating arrangements being very convenient, the view of the stage being equally good from all parts of the house, the most fastidious taste being gratified in the matter of decoration and embellishment, and the means of egress being delightfully easy. . . . Miss Wallis's assumption is full of charm and brightness. Mr. William Farren was an excellent Adam. Mr. Stirling spoke the seven ages speech beautifully, and was deservedly applauded. Mr. Matthew Brodie was an excellent Silvius. Mr. Seymour Jackson sang Amiens' songs charmingly. The entr'acte and incidental music, ably conducted by Mr. G. W. Byng, demand special notice."

SHAFTESBURY.—The People says: "The attention of the audience was riveted by force majeure of histrionic quality upon the Rosalind of Miss Wallis. The grace and quiet dignity of her opening scene [illegible] . . . A hearty [illegible] at the beginning and end of the programme was given to Miss Wallis and her company."

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Lloyd's News says: "Taste pervades the arrangements on either side of the footlights. Every section of the audience appears to have been carefully studied."

SHAFTESBURY.—The Weekly Dispatch says: "Whether we look to elegance or to solidity, the Shaftesbury takes a first place among the theatres of the metropolis. . . . Playgoers have an opportunity now of seeing this delightful piece ('As You Like It') rendered by a strong and competent company, each member of which is equal to the strain that the English classical drama puts on the powers and means of the player. . . . Miss Annie Rose's Celia is an engaging and winning impersonation, tinged with a poetic grace that lends to it an indescribable charm. . . . Mr. Robertson's fine voice and careful elocution give him many advantages in attaching Shakespearian characters. . . . Mr. Farren's Adam was a sound and finished piece of work, and the two Dukes were ably represented by Mr. J. R. Crauford and Mr. C. Arnold. Mr. Mackintosh's Touchstone was delightfully and dryly humorous. . . . [illegible] Mr. Seymour Jackson's singing in the part of Amiens was one of the chief attractions of the evening."

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Weekly Times says: "Under Mr. Smith's direction the comedy has been most elaborately mounted. Mr. Henry Emden has painted some charming scenery, the forest scenes being especially picturesque; and the stage is otherwise made bright by the sumptuous costumes of the rival Dukes' followers, the exiles' sober garments contrasting with fine effect with the dazzling dresses of the courtiers."

SHAFTESBURY.—News of the World says: "No praise can be too great for the manner in which 'As You Like It' has been placed upon the stage. Admirably as Miss Wallis plays as the heroine, there is no sign of the baneful influence of the 'star' system, and thus the Shakespearian student will feel the charm of a performance in which the poet's fine fancies, even on the lips of a subordinate actor, receive adequate illustration. It is one of the most artistic and complete of modern revivals."

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Reynolds' News says: "Was exquisitely mounted, the scenes of the Forest of Arden and of the shepherd's cottage being perfect stage pictures of rural beauty. The audience seemed thoroughly pleased to welcome the good old play in the bright new house, and Miss Wallis and her playfellows were honoured with much applause and several calls."

Arnold as Duke Frederick, Mr. Charles Cooper as Oliver, Mr. John Buckstone as Le Beau, Mr. Allen Thomas as Corin, Mr. Sidney Harcourt as William, Mr. Matthew Brodie as Silvius, and Mr. Forbes Robertson as Orlando.

THE WHITE DRAWING ROOM.—A Gentleman writes: "Whatever I do I do thoroughly. I determined to renovate everything in my drawing room with 'Aspinall's White Enamel,' so I had all the furniture and woodwork well pumice-stoned, then painted one coat. When that was hard I had it again pumice-stoned, then another coat of 'Aspinall,' and when that was hard I repeated the pumice-stoning process, and put on a third coat of 'Aspinall,' and the effect is beautiful beyond description; a perfectly hard marble surface, white as snow, and smooth as glass."

ASPINALL'S ENAMEL is sold everywhere, or sent post free in tins, 1s. 6d., and 3s. (for baths, 1s. 9d. and 3s. 6d.), from the Works, Peckham, London. Colour cards, showing over 100 tints, free on application.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

"I feel duty bound to inform you of the wonderful effects of Clarke's Blood Mixture on me. I have had suffering over two years of a severe nature. I first consulted the best medical aid I could possibly procure for over six months, till my means were run out, and with a sad heart I was compelled to come into the workhouse hospital, where I now am. I had been here 18 months, and my legs gradually got worse. I began to think they would never get better, till about five months ago I read in a copy of the Hull, East Yorkshire, and Lincolnshire Times of 'Clarke's Blood Mixture,' and I determined that when I could raise the means I would try it; so I commenced to deprive myself of little necessaries till at length I had raised eleven shillings. I got my sister to purchase me a large bottle. She brought me one in on May 6, and to my surprise she brought me 1s. 6d. back, which enabled me to purchase two small pots of your Miraculous Salve. I commenced to use the Blood Mixture on May 7. I then had five wounds on the left leg, one very large on the ankle-bone, one on the shin about the size of half-a-crown, and three on the calf almost as large. The right leg was somewhat similar, but there were three sores which I thought would break into one, but all are perfectly healed up now but one small place on the left ankle about the size of a shilling. There are 15 patients in the ward that I am in, and they were surprised to see my legs when I had taken the mixture a week, and there are three of them now using it. I am very sorry, indeed, that I cannot purchase another bottle. You may judge for yourself how I am fixed, after being in here 18 months. My sister, Mrs. Bulmer, lives at No. 26, Grimsby-lane, Market-place, Hull, and if you would kindly send me a small quantity of your Mixture to the above address I should be able to get it, and I shall never forget you as long as I live.—Yours faithfully, "EDWARD STAVERS.
"No. 3 Ward, Anlaby-road Workhouse Hospital, Hull, June 13, 1888."

LATER.

"I write to let you know how I am getting on. I received the bottle of Mixture you sent me, and the wounds are now completely healed up. I will be out of here in a few days, and get to work, which is already promised me. I am going to reside at my sister's, Mrs. Bulmer. If you wish to use this case for the benefit of other poor sufferers, do so. The results of your Mixture is really wonderful.—I remain, your thankful servant,
June 26, 1888. "EDWARD STAVERS."

THOUSANDS of TESTIMONIALS.

Messrs. A. John and Co., Druggists, &c., Agra, India, write under date June 5, 1888, as follows: "Dr. Mookund Lall, Hon. Surgeon to his Excellency the Viceroy of India, prescribes Clarke's Blood Mixture largely, and speaks highly of its efficacy in skin affections, &c. On this account we wrote our London agents, asking if you could supply the Mixture for dispensing purposes."

LONDON, MONDAY, OCTOBER 22.

The Queen has conferred the dignity of a marquisate on the Viceroy of India under the title of Marquis of Dufferin and Ava.

Her Majesty has approved of the appointment of Mr. J. P. B. Robertson, Solicitor-General for Scotland, to be Lord Advocate, in the room of the Right Hon. J. H. A. Macdonald.

Prince Albert Victor of Wales fulfilled a series of public engagements on Saturday at Manchester, where he was the guest of the Corporation. He was first presented with a loyal address from the citizens, and was subsequently entertained at luncheon in the Town Hall. Afterwards his Royal Highness opened a public recreation ground at Rusholme, laid the foundation-stone of a new wing of the Ancoats Hospital, and opened a new club for working lads.

Sir Henry Parkes, the Prime Minister of New South Wales, has informed his constituents that the Government have succeeded in reducing the expenditure of the colony by £1,000,000, and they propose to remodel taxation in the direction of Free Trade, and the adjustment of its burdens in accordance with the ability of the taxpayers.

The Session of the United States Congress closed on Saturday.

Our special correspondent in Italy, writing from Naples, says the visit of the German Emperor has materially strengthened the Triple Alliance, which is likely to endure for a long time to come and be a solid guarantee for the general peace.

Early yesterday morning the Emperor William arrived at Drewitz Station, near Potsdam, on his return from Rome.

Some disturbance has occurred at Saragossa in consequence of a hostile demonstration against Señor Canovas del Castillo, the Conservative ex-Prime Minister of Spain. Stones were thrown at the windows of his residence. Order was restored by the police and the Civil Guard.

At Suakin the rebels are making nightly attacks, and their guns have now been brought within 600 yards of the forts.

Despatches from General M'Queen announce that the Akazai tribe has submitted unconditionally.

Miss Sterling, a Salvation Army colonel, has been sent to prison at Berne for 100 days for making proselytes amongst minors.

Earl Granville was the guest of the Liverpool Reform Club on Saturday evening, and in acknowledging the toast of his health defended Mr. Gladstone for declining to give the details of his plan for dealing with the Irish question. He had already told them that he adhered to the principle of his former measure, but at the same time had intimated his readiness to consider all reasonable amendments, and as he was now out of office he was not bound to go beyond this. But the Government could claim no such privilege, and they ought to have an authoritative declaration whether their Irish policy was based on Lord Salisbury's Newport speech of three years ago, or in accordance with the Prime Minister's subsequent statement in favour of twenty years' resolute Government.

At a conference of Derbyshire miners on Saturday a resolution was unanimously passed pledging the men to go out on strike if an advance of 10 per cent. be not made in their wages.

Charles Smith and Arthur Wilkinson, both working men, were charged at the Worship-street police-court on Saturday with being the principals at a prize-fight in a German club in the City-road. Evidence having been given by the police, who broke into the ring, the prisoners were remanded, and were admitted to bail.

On Saturday the share markets were inactive but mostly firm. Mexican (Vera Cruz) Railway stocks were much better on the announcement of extra dividends from arrears of subvention, and Grand Trunks improved. Some of the Home railways were in request, while American receded, although the final prices were not the worst. Foreign Government bonds exhibited firmness. Copper, diamond, and Transvaal gold shares were in demand at higher prices.

THE PARNELL Commission holds its first sitting to-day. If the "charges and allegations" already set forth are fully investigated, the result will be a searching inquiry into the origin and causes, direct and indirect, of all the agrarian and political crimes that have been committed by discontented Irishmen for the last nine years. This is a very wide inquiry, and is not what the promoters of the investigation desire. For it must be remembered that it was Mr. PARNELL who demanded light. The three Judges will go through their task not because a great newspaper made certain charges against a public man, but because the accused gentleman challenged a complete sifting of those charges by preferring a claim for a Parliamentary Committee. The Government held, and, we think, wisely, that such a tribunal would be unsuitable. It would be composed of party politicians; it would be unversed in judicial forms; and it would lack authority and weight. While, however, rightly refusing the request in the form in which it was made, the Treasury Bench were naturally influenced by the circumstances of the case. They considered it not right to refuse to a distinguished political opponent the opportunity he craved of clearing his character, and they offered him a trial before three of her Majesty's Judges on whose impartiality and superiority to political issues they could confidently count. This offer was made not because the Times accused Mr. PARNELL, but because the leader of eighty-six Members of Parliament eagerly insisted on an investigation into charges affecting his personal character and political career. We are anxious to render this plain; because it would be an inconvenient precedent if, on every occasion when a newspaper attacked a Member of Parliament, a tribunal of Judges were to be constituted in order to sift the accusations. The erection of the special judicial machinery is a concession to Mr. PARNELL and his colleagues, because they declared up to the date of its announcement that they were unwilling to go into the ordinary courts of justice. We are inclined to regret that the Government did not adhere from first to last to this view of the case. If Mr. PARNELL were not satisfied with the scope of the inquiry or the personnel of the Commission, they should have withdrawn their offer, leaving him to his remedy in a court of law. It is also to be regretted that the etiquette of his office permits the Attorney-General to appear for one of the parties in a case of this kind. Sir RICHARD WEBSTER acts within his right, but his intervention gives to ignorant outsiders an impression as if the Government were indirectly prosecuting Mr. PARNELL.

Apart, however, from the blunders that have marked the preliminaries of this great trial, we do not think there is anything to deplore in the fact that three very eminent men will carefully investigate and impartially determine the issues that have been raised. We do not see any cause for the heated and bitter commentaries that have been poured forth by some of our Irish and Parnellite contemporaries. We are quite sure that if, during the progress of the agitation against the Corn Laws, any corresponding charges had been made against Mr. COBDEN and Mr. BRIGHT, they and their friends would have welcomed eagerly the widest, the most searching, and the most thorough investigation into their proceedings. No doubt there was a great difference between the two movements. The English agitation was avowedly intended to influence opinion alone; it organised lectures and meetings; it disseminated pamphlets, leaflets, and tracts: all its advocates were men of peace. The Parnellite movement was much more complicated. It arose out of the mixed ashes of Young Ireland, of Fenianism, and of Home Rule. It had some of the elements of all three. There was in it the patriotic fervour of the poetry and prose of 1848; it included the fiery passions of the Fenian conspiracy; it took up, but turned to its own use, the Parliamentary combinations of Mr. BUTT. What was new to it was the Transatlantic element. In America there were Irishmen who had never assisted any constitutional agitation on Irish soil. They had sent men and money to Ireland to organise rebellion, or to England in order to rescue imprisoned men by assassinating policemen or blowing up gaols; but they had no sympathy with Mr. BUTT and his mild and legal proceedings. When Mr. PARNELL became the leader, these patriots across the sea took a new departure; they did not abandon their own plans, but they consented to supply the sinews of war to the chiefs of the Parliamentary resistance, and to the leaders of the new agrarian war. The question for moralists to decide is how far men who were legal and constitutional in their own proceedings were justified in consenting to a political, personal, and pecuniary connection with men in America who advocated outrages and were the avowed enemies of the QUEEN. The apologists for Mr. PARNELL and his colleagues say, "These men were engaged in a great effort to secure the Irish tenants in their homes and to bring about the legislative independence of Ireland. When they were offered thousands of dollars from America were they to inquire into all that had been said or written or done across the sea by the bringers of these gifts? Do not all political parties accept contributions in money from all subscribers?" There is a certain force in this plea, but the question is one of degree. The collection of money for Mr. PARNELL was made in America by the same men who at the same time were collecting money for a "skirmishing war" against England and English property, and who advertised each agrarian murder in Ireland as "Another Land Thief Shot." It is certain that at no previous period of Irish history was there any such close connection between constitutional methods and treasonable acts. It is also plain that it was the duty of Mr. PARNELL and his friends to have dissociated themselves sharply and distinctly from outrages in Ireland and treason abroad by clear and emphatic denunciations of the high treason that was preached in America and the murders that were committed at home. Beyond this, however, we cannot go. It would be impossible to hold Mr. PARNELL responsible for the dynamite he did not denounce or for the murders he did not condemn. Whenever a national, patriotic, or revolutionary movement is begun—and the Parnellite agitation was all three—there are leaders who are cautious and wise, while at the tail of the agitation there are followers who are hot, passionate, and ready to commit crime. All may work towards the same end, but the moderate men cannot be held answerable for the deeds of their violent followers simply because they fight under the same flag. The Bristol rioters of 1831 were ruffians who called themselves Reformers, and the Tories of that day said, "This is the result of the agitation promoted by HENRY BROUGHAM, Lord JOHN RUSSELL, and Earl GREY." But history has made the issue plain. If the leaders of the Parnellite movement can show that they kept themselves quite clear of personal or political contact with the organisers of Transatlantic treason and Irish outrages, then public opinion will not hold them responsible for every mad act committed by wild Irishmen since 1879.

As to the letters which, in popular imagination, constitute the kernel of the controversy, the probability is that they will remain, from first to last, matters of dispute. Nobody who knows what forgers can do will deny the possibility of wonderful fabrications likely to deceive the greatest experts. Therefore, the letters alone can hardly suffice to convict Mr. PARNELL. His opponents may be able to adduce secondary evidence in their support, or, on the other hand, the Irish leaders may demonstrate them to be forgeries by some blunder or omission fatal to the theory that they are genuine. As to the letters themselves, we do not see that, even if they were proved to have been written by Mr. PARNELL, they convict him of anything that was not known before. We must look at this matter as if we were Irishmen ourselves. The leaders of the League never denied that they were haters of English rule. They have admitted, in the House of Commons and elsewhere, that if they saw a chance of successful insurrection they would recommend it. They openly disclaimed loyalty to the Crown; they pointedly rejoiced when England got into difficulties abroad. They were therefore guilty of no hypocrisy when they regarded with a certain amount of tenderness the errors of their infuriated young countrymen, who by illegal and violent methods sought to intimidate English rulers and to destroy English rule. They looked upon Dublin Castle as the centre of an infamous Government, and, though they doubtless regretted the murder of Lord FREDERICK CAVENDISH, it is pretty certain that they did not lament the murder of Mr. BURKE, who embodied the whole force of a detested system. Now that the Parnellite party has found allies in Great Britain they are anxious to abjure their old tone and to walk in the paths of peace. Nevertheless there can be no doubt that their past differed considerably from their present attitude, and that the spirit of their agitation now is as distinct from its spirit in the past as Mr. GLADSTONE, their new patron, is the antipodes of Mr. PATRICK FORD, their former ally. It might save trouble if this change were confessed. The Liberals under Mr. GLADSTONE have abjured coercion; the Irish party under Mr. PARNELL have renounced revolt. Nothing, however, can blot out the facts that at one time the Liberals coerced Ireland, and that the Irish leaders were more or less allied with the apostles and disciples of high treason and crime. The extent of that alliance Mr. Justice HANNEN and his colleagues will investigate and declare.

RACING men to whom old traditions of the Turf are more precious than "six to four on the field and five to two bar one"—which was said by "The Druid" to be sweeter music to some ears than that of the spheres—will heave a sigh of regret when Lord MARCUS BERESFORD drops his flag to-morrow to start a field of six or eight and twenty horses "Across the Flat" for the Cambridgeshire Stakes. There will, probably, be not more than two or three persons present at the fiftieth recurrence of the greatest handicap in the world who saw Mr. RAMSAY's Lanercost win the first Cambridgeshire in 1839. If, however, WILLIAM DAY should be tempted to visit Newmarket, to see how Bismarck—who is trained by his son, ALFRED DAY—performs in the big race of the meeting, he will not forget the Criterion Stakes of 1839, in which he rode Lord GEORGE BENTINCK's third string, Grey Milton, who, together with Capote, the property of the same owner, was started to assist the far-famed Crucifix, ridden by JOHN DAY, junior, to get off when the flag fell. Previously to that day Crucifix had run in eight races without experiencing defeat, but she was so restive at the post that innumerable false starts were of frequent occurrence whenever she was a competitor. In the Criterion she lost three or four lengths when at last she got off, and General YATES's Gibraltar, to whom she gave seven pounds, ran a dead-heat with her. On the same day the first Cambridgeshire was celebrated, and the three placed horses in it were all trained in the North. Mr. Bowes was then in what Burns calls his "glorious youthful prime," and every animal that carried his colours was regarded as preference stock by those who pulled the market's strings. Accordingly, Mr. Bowes's Mickleton Maid and his Hetman Platoff, both three-year-olds, started first and second favourites for the Cambridgeshire, but both were easily beaten by the Scotch-bred Lanercost, aged four years. It is characteristic of those primitive times that the Cambridgeshire was the first race of the meeting, and the Criterion the second, and that the only other event on the same day was a Handicap Sweepstakes over the Ditch Mile, in which there were but three starters. Had it not been for matches the Houghton Meeting could hardly have dragged its slow length along over five days, on the last day of which a set-to between Mr. Bowes' Mickleton Maid and Colonel Peel's Dey of Algiers caused the greatest excitement. The odds were three to one on the Dey of Algiers, but the filly, beautifully ridden by Colonel Peel's favourite jockey Nat, beat Arthur Pavis by a neck. It should be added that the Dey of Algiers had already won the Audley End Stakes before he met Mickleton Maid, and that next year, ridden by Nat, he won the Chester Cup, beating Melbourne and Lanercost, and an excellent field. Such was the Houghton Meeting of 1839, and next year the Cambridgeshire, which was still run on the Monday, was won by an Irish four-year-old, Mr. Graydon's Roscius, who started at an extreme outside price, and beat Colonel Peel's Dey of Algiers, who was second, and eleven other starters. Mr. Thornhill, who had opposed the creation of the Cesarewitch and the Cambridgeshire with all his might, remarked, after the victory of Roscius in the latter, that these great handicaps were sops thrown to Scotland and Ireland. The first two Cesarewitches fell to Cruiskeen and Clarion—the former bred in Ireland and the latter in Scotland; while the first Cambridgeshire was won by the Scotch Lanercost, and the second by the Irish Roscius.

We are tempted to linger among the rich memories of the Autumn Meetings at Newmarket in the early years of her Majesty's reign, because there are few now living who saw Lanercost, Beeswing, Melbourne, Bloomsbury, and Harkaway in their prime. With the exception of Mr. Joseph Osborne, whose grey colt, Mercury, beat Harkaway for the Madrid Stakes, at the Curragh, in 1837, and of Mr. James Weatherby, there is probably no one now who remembers races which were run half a century since or more, and is in a position to testify from actual experience that the Turf was a far more entertaining pursuit when there were no railways, no electric wires, and no daily training reports than it is at present. Let us pass to the third Cesarewitch, won by Lord Palmerston's Iliona, who set all the classics, or so-called classics, of the Turf wrangling as to the right pronunciation of her name—and to the third Cambridgeshire, which was won by Mr. Holmes's Vulcan, another Irish four-year-old, who started at thirty to one, and beat the Melody colt—a tremendous Danebury "pot"—by a length. The four-year-old charter of Cambridgeshire winners was maintained in 1842 by Lord Albemarle's Ralph, and in 1843 Nat—the name not of a jockey but of a horse—was the first three-year-old to win a race in which thirty-one animals of the same age have been successful during the last forty-nine years. In 1844 Lord Stradbroke's Evenus, aged four, defeated Faugh-a-ballagh, one of the best three-year-olds that ever ran at Newmarket; and then followed, in 1845, the triumph of Mr. Greville's Alarm, carrying seven stone nine pounds, which was at that time regarded as an impossible weight for a three-year-old. In 1847 the victory of the aged Widow recalls the ruses by which Tom Crommelin and the late Lord Rivers got the mare handicapped at seven stone—ruses which included the employment of The Widow as a hack in Hyde Park with the still-living Mr. Albert Ricardo on her back. In 1848, Colonel Peel ran first and second with Dacia and Taffrail, the former, who finished second to The Cur in the Cesarewitch, being a great favourite for the Cambridgeshire. At the last moment, Mr. Justice, one of the largest bookmakers of that day, approached Colonel Peel, who knew that Dacia and Taffrail were almost the same animal, and offered to get him fifty thousand to one thousand about the latter if he would declare to win with her. The Colonel replied that the betting world had backed Dacia heavily on her public form, and that his two fillies should run on their merits. In Raby, the winner in 1849, evidence was given that curby hocks do not militate against a horse's chance for the Cambridgeshire when run against the collar from start to finish; and in 1850 John Kent, the still living-trainer of Mr. Gratwicke's Landgrave, upset the Duke of Bedford's Bordeaux—the most formidable rod in pickle that Admiral Rous ever nursed for the great handicap at the top of the town. On Mrs. Taft, who won the Cesarewitch, and on Truth, who won the Cambridgeshire in 1851—both being extreme outsiders—Davies, the "Leviathan," was said to have landed between sixty and seventy thousand pounds; and the Knight of the Shire, who won the Cambridgeshire of 1852 for Lord Bruce, afterwards Lord Ailesbury, recalls the last Houghton Meeting ever witnessed by Colonel Anson before he went to India in 1853, to die there in 1857 upon the first outbreak of the great mutiny. By Little David, who carried Fordham and five stone ten pounds on his back, and defeated a field of thirty-nine starters, running away with his tiny jockey into the town before he could be stopped, another dire blow was administered by a fifty to one outsider to the backers of the favourite, who ran second for the Cesarewitch and the Cambridgeshire.

In 1854 we come across the first of many foreigners by which the great handicap of to-morrow has been won; and, with Scherz, Palestro, Adonis, Montargis, Peut-être, Jongleur, Foxhall, and Plaisanterie to boast of, our rivals across the Channel and the Atlantic have no cause to complain of the churlishness or inhospitality of English sporting men. The victories of Malacca and Odd Trick in 1856 and 1857 will remind the still-living Mr. Henry Curzon—the brother of Lord Howe and of the Duchess of Beaufort—that the late Alfred Day, who rode in the Cesarewitch in both years, advised him to back the two Cambridgeshire winners from what he saw of their speed in the long race. Among the most notable Cambridgeshires of recent years we may mention the triumphs of Catch-em-alive in 1863, for which Sir William Codrington was indebted to William Day—and of Ackworth in 1864—whom the young Marquis of Hastings bought from Harry Hill at a price which that Talleyrand of the Turf thought much too small for a Cambridgeshire winner. Passing over the dead-heat between Lozenge and Wolsey in 1867, which ended in the victory of the former, and the gallant achievement of See-Saw in 1868, whom Mr. Christopher Fenning persuaded Lord Wilton to buy, and who as a three-year-old carried eight stone two pounds successfully up the hill, we come to the magnificent display of riding by George Fordham on Sabinus in 1871, which frustrated perhaps the best-laid plot ever concocted by the astute owners and managers of Allbrook. It was said that Sir Frederick Johnstone upset the nerves of Allbrook's rider at the last moment by putting him on five hundred to nothing; but in Fordham, who followed the footpath which leads along the old Cambridgeshire track, the backers of other horses had perhaps the most formidable jockey that ever rode at Newmarket to encounter, with the exception of Jem Robinson. Next year Playfair, an outsider, was backed by the Prince of Wales, who took a fancy to his name; and in 1876 occurred the far-famed victory of Rosebery—the first winner of the double crown which has since been carried off by Foxhall and Plaisanterie. In 1878, the best horse that ever triumphed for the Cambridgeshire was seen in Isonomy, and Lucetta's success in 1880 reminds us that Blanton, her trainer, believed that Robert the Devil, who was in the same stable, could have won with ten stone on his back. There is enough in the history of the Cambridgeshire, and of the old course over which it was run, to fill many volumes which would possess interest for thoughtful lovers of horseracing; and, although the change from the top of the town to the Flat is probably advantageous to backers, we can but hope that the second half-century of the great Newmarket handicap will be as prosperous and entertaining as was the first.

History has not troubled herself to any appreciable extent about the descendants of the eighty Generals to whom Alexander in the midst of his career of Indian conquests assigned Asiatic wives and whom he endowed with rich possessions. The names of Craterus and Hephæstion, Heracleides and Perdiccas have, it is true, come down to posterity; but Lethe has swallowed up the chronicles of their spouses and their children, to say nothing of those of the bulk of the companions in arms of the mighty Macedonian. Far different has it been, and is it still, with the satraps and the Generals of Napoleon the Great. There is not one of the comrades of the modern Alexander whose biography has not been more or less exhaustively written; nay, public attention rarely fails to be excited by the notice of the passing away of even a remote descendant of one of Napoleon's Marshals or of his most prominent Generals. The famous Andoche-Junot, Duke of Abrantès, has, for example, been dead seventy-five years; but the world has not yet forgotten the exploits of the dashing soldier whose madcap bravery earned for him among his comrades the sobriquet of "La Tempête," and within the last few days the Parisian newspapers have teemed with anecdotal reminiscences awakened by the decease at the age of eighty-six of Madame Amet, née Mademoiselle Joséphine Junot. As she was herself fond of repeating in her latter days, the daughter of the Marshal Duke of Abrantès was born in a golden age, when all who were so fortunate as to live in the sunshine of Imperial favour were clothed in purple and fine linen, and were radiant with gold and silver and jewels of rare price. This was especially the case with the great military and civil functionaries of the Empire, on whom Napoleon bestowed wealth with an unsparingly lavish hand, on the sole but slightly onerous condition that they should spend their money almost as freely as it was granted to them. Junot, in particular, was gorged with wealth, part of which accrued from his highly-remunerated military employments; another part from the splendid dotation given to him at his marriage by his Imperial master; while no inconsiderable portion, so it was whispered, of his treasures were the result of sundry very equivocal transactions in Spain and Portugal. His daughter Joséphine, however, could have enjoyed only a very brief view of the magnificence of the Courts of the Tuileries and St. Cloud, and could have participated only to a slight extent in the splendours of the First Empire. She was but a little child of eleven when the Duke, her father, bankrupt in reputation and in purse, committed suicide by throwing himself from a window at the house of his father at Montbard. He had never recovered the discredit into which he had fallen in the eyes of Napoleon through his complete overthrow by Wellington at Vimiera, followed, as it was, by a transaction equally disastrous to the cause of France, the Convention of Cintra; which, by the way, as Napier has shown, was signed at a place many miles distant from Cintra itself.

Napoleon could not well try by court-martial a General who had been vanquished in fair fight, and who had undeniably shown at Vimiera the most chivalric valour. Junot was neither prosecuted nor disgraced; but his career practically ended with his signal collapse in Portugal. He filled a number of obscure commands in Austria and Spain, and made a somewhat feeble appearance in the Russian campaign; and his subsequent appointment to the governorship of the Illyrian provinces partook more of the nature of exile than of promotion. He became fractious and despondent; and, retiring to France in search of rest, he was attacked by a fever consequent upon chagrin and disappointment, in an access of which he destroyed himself. The illustrious historian of the Peninsular War, while he was unable to conceal the notorious reputation of Junot for prodigality and profligacy, has, perhaps, rendered him greater justice as a military commander than has been accorded to the Duke of Abrantès by his own countrymen. They could never forget Vimiera and Cintra. Napoleon himself behaved with greater generosity to the unsuccessful General. Of his faults he was fully cognisant; but he also recognised his unswerving loyalty and his splendid bravery. He did not forget the tempestuous soldier who had fought so gallantly in Italy, in Egypt, and at Austerlitz, and who had won his dukedom and his marshal's bâton by his astonishingly rapid conquest of Portugal—a country which he subdued in the space of eight short weeks, although the triumph was made ephemeral by the genius and sagacity of Arthur Wellesley. Junot was, moreover, endeared to Napoleon by the ties of personal friendship, and there was never a faster or a more affectionate friend than the Corsican, who was himself, as Manzoni has nobly pointed out in the "Cinque Maggio," "the object of immeasurable hatred and of unextinguishable love." When the youthful General Bonaparte was commanding the artillery before Toulon he wished one day to dictate a despatch, and called for a soldier who could write. "C'est moi qui sait écrire," cheerfully cried a young sergeant named Junot, springing from the ranks. He was guilty of a slight grammatical solecism in his response to the General's appeal. In strict accuracy he should have said, "C'est moi qui sais écrire"; but he atoned for his blunder in grammar by a capital "bon mot"; for even while he was penning the despatch a shell bursting close by covered the paper with sand, and dried the ink in a moment. "No blotting-paper required," quoth Sergeant Junot. The jest made his fortune. Napoleon never lost sight of the valiant young sergeant, who became his aide-de-camp, and who loved him very much as a dog loves his master; for it is on indubitable record that after Toulon, when Napoleon was in Paris, out of employment and penniless, now sponging for a dinner on Talma the actor, now seeking in vain to obtain credit for a pair of boots, Junot cleaved to the indigent Corsican adventurer, and harboured him and fed him. The ex-aide-de-camp had been bred to the bar, and his caligraphy was excellent; he could earn a few livres now and then by copying law-writings and drawing maps for the War Office, and he shared his humble earnings with his beloved General. The Emperor and King no more forgot the bounty and fidelity of Junot than he did the hospitality of Talma.

For the incorrigibly dissolute and improvident sergeant who became Duke of Abrantès it was difficult, however, even for the most generous of masters to do aught that could be permanently advantageous. Junot was roundly accused by his contemporaries of having enriched himself by the plunder of Portugal; but it is unquestionable that, even if he did succeed in amassing wealth, he had not the common sense to keep it, and he left nothing to his wife and children but a load of debt and a phantom title. His widow survived him full five-and-twenty years, mostly passed in sorrowful vicissitudes of fortune. In the decline of life she "turned" authoress in the most deplorable sense of the term, and wrote a multitude of novels, romances, and memoirs, among which the only production that has escaped oblivion is her romantic and mainly apocryphal "Life of Napoleon," in which, boasting of her own descent from the Byzantine Comneni, she strove to prove that the Bonapartes were the descendants of a Greek family named Callomeros, who had emigrated to Corsica and Italianised their Romaic patronymic in the equivalent Bonaparte. The latter years of the poor Duchess of Abrantès were passed in lamentable poverty; and in her copious correspondence with Honoré de Balzac may be found more than one pathetic allusion to the hypothecation of her trinkets, even down to her silver spoons, at the Mont de Piété. The scions of the Junot family were not quite so unfortunate, although the second Duke of Abrantès, the eldest son of the Marshal and godson of Napoleon, who started fairly enough as a diplomatist, showed so many signs of eccentricity, and ran so deeply into debt, that, retiring from the diplomatic service, he was fain, like his mother, to turn author, and to write a large number of novels now very completely forgotten. The "cacoethes scribendi" seems to have adhered to the Junots, but more as a curse than as a blessing, ever since the memorable declaration of the tempestuous young sergeant in the trenches before Toulon. The third Duke, second son of the Marshal, was only a soldier, and a very brave one, who died in 1859 from wounds received at the battle of Solferino; but his sister Joséphine devoted herself with much assiduity to the pursuit of literature. She was very piously brought up, became for a time a sister of charity, and actually received from the Archbishop of Paris the honorary title of a canoness; but in 1841, at the mature age of thirty-nine, she exhibited a proof of the characteristic eccentricity of the Junot family by throwing aside her veil and her rosary and marrying a very respectable individual called Amet, engaged in administrative pursuits. Moral and edifying stories, novels, and essays flowed from Madame Junot-Amet's pen; and the literary faculty of the family was still further manifested by her elder sister Constance, who married a captain in the army, who became a Prefect under the brief dictature of General Cavaignac. Madame Aubert was not quite so copious as Madame Amet; but she made a certain reputation as a writer on the recondite topic of the Paris fashions. In the male line, although the dukedom of Abrantès still lingers in shadowy fashion, the family of Junot is virtually extinct. There are yet direct descendants of Bernadotte, Prince of Ponte Corbo, King of Sweden; of Davout, Prince of Eckmuhl; of Ney, Prince of the Moskovo; of Savary, Duke of Rovigo; of Lannes, Duke of Montebello; of Murat, Grand Duke of Berg; but the name of Junot has no longer a male representative, and the dukedom which Napoleon created in arrogant exultation at the transitory conquest of Portugal has, by the caprice of fortune, fallen to the lot of the son of a highly-respectable stockbroker, who has become so disgusted with the factious squabbles of the Bonapartists as to be fain to take refuge in the tranquil and shady groves of Legitimism.

PARIS DAY BY DAY.

[BY SPECIAL WIRE.]

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

PARIS, Sunday Night.

Those Parisians who did not take advantage of the delightful weather which prevailed to-day in order to go down to Chantilly for the races had a remarkable attraction nearer home in the shape of a balloon race. At four o'clock this afternoon several aerostats went up from the enclosure where the palace of the Tuileries once stood. When the aerial vessels were well in the clouds throngs of people clustered along the boulevards and gazed at the balloons as they sailed slowly and steadily through a sunlit sky. At one time the aerostats seemed to be in line, but after a few moments the largest shot out before its companions and held its course until it disappeared from the limited horizon of the Boulevardiers. They were only show balloons, after all, and manned by aeronauts of minor note; but they monopolised as much public attention for a time as if the sky sailors were about to do something hitherto unattempted by the Tissandiers and the Jovises of the perilous profession. Paris, independently of the attractions in the clouds, was thoroughly at its best to-day, and owing to the exceptional mildness of the afternoon it was possible for those many citizens who like to sip, to see, and to be seen outside the cafés to gratify their whim in this direction without fear of catching cold. Later on the chill of advancing winter made itself felt, and the theatres, all of which were open, formed comfortable resorts during the evening.

This evening the Prince of Wales left for England, viâ Calais, after spending the day with Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, at Ferrières, where Lord Lytton is staying. Yesterday his Royal Highness visited the exhibition works at the Champ-de-Mars, in company with the Marquis Du Lau and General Ellis, with whom he also viewed the superb collection of old plate belonging to Baron Jerome Pichon. The Prince of Wales was particularly interested in the famous "Coupe du Connetable," as it is called, which was presented early in the seventeenth century by James I. of England to the Duke of Frias, Constable of Castille. This cup has had a memorable history. It is unique of its kind, being of gold of twenty-three carats, richly enamelled and adorned with a profusion of pearls. The upper part depicts the life and martyrdom of Saint Agnes, while the lower part is embellished with the four figures symbolising the Evangelists. It is adorned with several crowns, Henry VIII. had the Roses of York and Lancaster added to it, and the chalice is altogether a marvel of rich chasing and artistic design. It is mentioned in two inventories of Queen Elizabeth's reign, couched in Old English, and now in the Harleian collection of manuscripts. It is believed to be of Flemish workmanship, and to date from 1360, or thereabouts. After leaving the English Treasury it had a curious history, which has just been related to me by a distinguished connoisseur. On his return to Spain the Constable of Castille, who had been acting as Ambassador of Philip III. in England, presented it to the convent of Santa Clara de Medina. There it remained for many years until, the convent being badly off for this world's goods, it was decided that the vessel should be sold. Efforts were made in Paris to find a purchaser, and it was finally bought five years ago by Baron Jerome Pichon. The descendants of the Duke of Frias, the constable who had made the convent a present of the cup, engaged in a lawsuit for its recovery, but it now remains in the possession of the Baron, of whose collection it is one of the brightest, if not the most brilliant gem. I am assured that there is not the slightest doubt as to its identity, which is further confirmed by a Latin inscription. Some time ago there was an idea of buying it for the British Museum, but Baron Jerome Pichon asked £20,000 for it, and the project was abandoned. Besides this unique cup and many other objects of interest, the seals of the Comtesse de Toulouse, sister of Richard Cœur de Lion, were shown to his Royal Highness.

A few nights ago the escutcheon placed over the door of the German Consulate at Havre was torn down and removed to a short distance. The sub-Prefect as soon as he heard of the affair called on the German Consul to express his regret and announce that an investigation had been set on foot, and yesterday M. Goblet made a similar statement to Count Münster in Paris. This unpleasant incident probably accounts for the seizure to-day of the last number of a caricature print that blossomed out yesterday morning with a scurrilous sketch, in which the German Emperor was depicted surrounded by women represented by Signor Crispi and Cardinal Rampolla. The sinister innuendo was obvious, but it should be remembered that if French caricaturists of a certain class occasionally indulge in very questionable freaks at the expense of foreign potentates, they systematically revel in the quite unmolested, coarsest, and most suggestive squibs at their own politicians.

The event of the day is the appointment of General de Miribel to the command of the 6th Army Corps. The general is one of the most brilliant officers in the French army, and, in the opinion of competent judges, he is the ablest organiser in the service. In point of importance the 6th Corps is second to none. With headquarters at Chalons-sur-Marne, to it is entrusted the defence of the Eastern frontier. If war were to break out the first shock of battle would fall on the sixth corps, to command which is the ambition of every general of note. It might, therefore, primâ facie have been presumed that the selection of General de Miribel for so distinguished and responsible a post would have given unmitigated satisfaction here; but the very reverse is the case. The Moderates hoped that he would have been appointed Chief of the Staff, and retained permanently at the War Office in that capacity, superintending the mobilisation if complications were to ensue. They are, therefore, bitterly disappointed, and accuse M. de Freycinet of culpable weakness in yielding to the clamours of the Radicals; for General de Miribel has for years been vastly unpopular with the advanced Republicans. He is accused by them of having been on very intimate terms with the old party of moral order, and when Gambetta on the formation of his short-lived Ministry at the end of 1881 placed him in the position which the Opportunists trusted that he would again fill, a formidable outcry was raised by the Radicals. This clamour is now being renewed à propos of his nomination to the command of the Sixth Army Corps. So the Minister of War has pleased no one, except perhaps the person most interested, for it is more than likely that when the retirement of General Fevrier, another distinguished officer, on account of age was decided upon, General de Miribel applied for it, deeming the command of the troops on the eastern frontier the highest honour that could be conferred upon him. General Fevrier has been awarded the military medal by special decree, which means that a grateful country has in his case exhausted its stock of laurels. Impartial critics would have preferred to see General Fevrier, who is still hale and hearty, remain at Chalons-sur-Marne, General de Miribel being nominated chief of the staff. M. de Freycinet, by the way, has again proceeded southward to inspect the system of defence on the frontier of the Alpes Maritimes.

Yesterday the Chamber voted the Bankruptcy Bill, and to-morrow, if the committee's reports can be printed and distributed in time, it will devote its attention to the Estimates. M. Floquet has long been anxious that the Budget should be taken in hand with the least possible delay.

At the Cabinet Council held yesterday, under M. Carnot's presidency, M. Peytral, the Minister of Finance, communicated to his colleagues the complete draft of his Income-tax Bill. Another consultation is to take place to-morrow morning, at which the measure will be further discussed, although Ministers already approve of the imposition of an income-tax in some shape or form. To put the matter briefly, M. Peytral proposes that a tax of 1 per cent. be levied on all professional, industrial, and commercial incomes, those derived from all other sources being subjected to 1½ per cent. All incomes "possessed or produced in France" come within the scope of M. Peytral's bill. It seems to be imagined in some quarters that the creation of an income-tax would promptly be followed by the abolition of certain other taxes. This, however, is not the case. The idea of an income-tax has long been popular with advanced Republicans, though on what ground is not distinctly perceptible, since it would be levied on all classes alike, and the great majority of Frenchmen are of opinion that they already contribute enough, and more than enough, to the Treasury. It is, indeed, more than probable that political agitators will readily avail themselves of the new weapon which the Government is about to hand to them, and will wield it with considerable effect.

Politicians and financiers are now busily engaged in studying the report on the Budget of 1889, which has been laid on the table in the Chamber by M. Jules Roche. The Government has set down the expenditure required at 3,010,752,650 francs, or £120,430,106 sterling. The receipts are put down at 3,011,392,675 francs, or £120,455,707 sterling. The Budget Committee notes that the credits required are higher than those allowed in the estimates of last year, while no provision of an additional nature beyond that already sanctioned had been made for the redemption of the short term bonds, and the Government had moreover asked for extraordinary credits amounting to 178,654,260 francs for the army and 14,298,000 francs for the navy. The Budget, on the whole, bears a strong family resemblance to its predecessors, and very little financial headway has really been made. The rough estimate of the deficit for 1887 is 40,000,000 francs, and on Oct. 1 of the present year the over expenditure amounted to 6,000,000 francs.

Corsica is now being put into an effective state of defence, and its governor, who rejoices in the Hibernian-like name of Swiney, has just left Paris, after having conferred with M. de Freycinet on the subject. General Swiney has given the Minister of War to understand that besides the new defences, the Mediterranean stronghold will require a larger garrison, as at the present time it has only one regiment of infantry and three batteries of artillery.

Laughter rippled abundantly over the features of those who were present last night at the first performance of M. Ernest Blum and Raoul Toché's three act comedy "Le Parfum" in the Palais Royal. The play it is needless to say was strongly spiced, but the humour of the situations was enough to give a laughing fit to a meeting-house full of puritans. The first-nighters, who are not easily moved, laughed all through the second and third acts, and some of them are even said to have blushed. "Le Parfum" is sure to hold the boards of the gay little Rabelaisian rendezvous in the Palais Royal, and its authors, one of whom (M. Toché) manifested some uneasiness as to results at the beginning of the piece, may now rest on the laurels which they have won almost before the real Paris season has commenced. In the long first act we are introduced to Montesson, a celebrated chemist, who has to attend a scientific congress at Versailles. Before his departure he has concocted a new perfume, which is coveted by a rival savant, Poupardier, who wants to discover the secret of its preparation. Montesson's household is composed of his wife, Sylvanie; his godson and pupil, Théodule; his assistant, Paul; and a pretty maid called Adèle. Montesson casts sheeps' eyes on Adèle, who is loved by Théodule, while Paul has a liaison with Madame Poupardier, wife of the opposition chemist. In the meantime the bottle of perfume which Montesson has taken such pains to prepare is broken by Adèle, and its odour overpowers the whole household. Consequently Madame Montesson, whose husband really intends to return from Versailles during the night in order to see his servant, sleeps in a garden tent with Adèle, and the comic complications begin to slow music after midnight. Poupardier comes in with a bull's-eye lantern, and looks for the bottle of perfume. Théodule prowls around in order to meet Adele, and the deceiver, Montesson, returns from Versailles for the same purpose. The subsequent events form the risky part of the comedy, and there is no necessity to enter into them here. The piece was played with consummate ability by Madame Céline Chaumont, who was Montesson's wife, and by her clever colleagues who literally kept the house in a roar.

Blood and blasphemy were the distinguishing features in the plays presented by the manager of the new Théâtre Libre the other night. A tale of horror, appropriately called "The Butchers," was succeeded by "L'Amante du Christ," in which a popular French view of the relationship of the founder of Christianity to Mary Magdalen was expounded. Strange to say, however, the brief Parisian counterpart of the Ober Ammergau passion play was reverently presented, and was received with considerable emotion. The author's aim was to portray Magdalen as having been purified by the love of Him whose feet she anointed. The actor who played Christ, M. Mévisto, was realistic and impressive, but no person with any respect for religion could regard the extraordinary performance as otherwise than intrinsically irreverent and profane.

The new play which M. Auguste Vacquerie has written for the Gymnase, but which will not be brought out until the end of November, was first called "En Puissance de Mari," but that title has been altered to "Jalousie." It relates the story of a woman's sorrow owing to the green-eyed monster's influence, and in its sombre and tragic passion it will form a striking contrast to the ethereal mildness and refined delicacy of the "Abbé Constantin."

Madame Ledru Rollin, widow of the celebrated Tribune of the People, has just died at Fontenay-aux-Roses, outside Paris, in her sixty-eighth year. Her maiden name was Sharp, and during her husband's exile under the Third Empire she lived with him a long time in Maida-vale. Madame Ledru Rollin leaves a considerable amount of property, which goes to her two nephews, who are bankers in Paris.

Yesterday took place at Montmartre the funeral of the Dowager Duchess de Fitzjames, who died in England last week in her eighty-fifth year. The Fitzjames's are descendants of Marshal Berwick, who settled in France in the reign of Louis XIV., and whose son, the Bishop of Soissons and Court Almoner, called upon Louis XV. to send away the Duchesse de Chateauroux. The Duchess de Fitzjames who has just died leaves four children, the present Duke, the Duchess Salviati, Count Charles de Fitzjames, and the Countess de Biron, another daughter (Madame de Charette) having died prematurely in Rome.

Count de Marsan, alias Pierre Joseph Jolly, who was captured a few weeks ago at Caen, where he was a burglar by night and an aristocrat, gambler, lady-killer, and general viveur by day, has had as distinguished a career in crime as the lamented Allmayer, who is now safely between locks, bolts, and bars. Jolly, when arrested in Paris twelve months ago, after a theft of 30,000f, escaped from the doom of the juge d'instruction at the Palais. When captured at Caen he jumped from the roof of a house, landing safely in the street, but was taken after a run. In the Calais gaol the other day he succeeded in tripping up his two gaolers and in making a dash for freedom, but was re-arrested on the Quai de l'Horloge. In the meantime the nets are thickening around the other sham count, Louis Frederick Linska de Castillon, alias Prado, who will not give his real name, and who stands charged with the murder of Marie Aguetan, a frequenter of the promenoir of the Eden Theatre. Half a dozen French and Spanish women who lived with Prado at various times are to give evidence at the trial, which will take place early in November.

There was another crowded attendance at Chantilly to-day, the superb weather rendering the afternoon most enjoyable. The various races were well contested. Subjoined are the results of the sport: Prix de Mortefontaine—Farandole, 4 to 1 agst (ridden by Hicks), 1; Verrière (Willis), 5 to 2 agst, 2; Médor (Benson), 7 to 1 agst, 3. Prix de la Fable—Catharina (Dodge), 3 to 1 on, 1; Sauterelle (Hartley), 3 to 1 agst, 2; Sensitive (Bartholomew), 10 to 1 agst, 3. Won by two lengths; Sensitive a bad third.

BERLIN, Oct. 21.

Kaiser Wilhelm reached Drewitz Station early this morning. Kaiserin Augusta Victoria was waiting on the platform to receive her august husband. Opening the carriage door himself, his Majesty hastened to his consort, whom he kissed affectionately, and then asked, "How are the boys?" On reaching the Marble Palace he found the five blond-haired Princes waiting to welcome their father, with them being his Majesty's mother, Kaiserin Friedrich, and his sisters, Princesses Victoria, Sophie, and Margarethe of Prussia. From the surrounding country numbers of people had flocked to witness their Sovereign's arrival, and all found the Kaiser looking remarkably well. By the way the reports of his Majesty's indisposition are semi-officially contradicted.

Bremen, Oct. 21.—To-day the free port of Bremen was formally incorporated in the German Customs Union. Herr Buff, the Burgomaster, delivered a speech on the occasion, in which he said: "Our Emperor upholds the power of the Empire in order to ensure peace. May God grant to his Majesty strength to remain a bulwark of peace with the aid of the Empire's might."

NEWS FROM VIENNA.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

VIENNA, Oct. 21.

In terms of no ordinary violence the Russian press continues to attack Germany. The Graschdanin, which is generally supposed to represent the prevailing disposition at Court, says in so many words that since the death of the late Emperor William the prestige of the House of Hohenzollern has materially diminished; and it adds that Prince Bismarck's proceedings in connection with the publication of Kaiser Frederick's diary are beneath criticism. Something has evidently gone wrong since the Emperor of Germany's visit to St. Petersburg. The Austrian and Hungarian papers manifested satisfaction, if not enthusiasm, with his Majesty's visit to Vienna, though few of them have made any reference to it since he left the country. To-day his brother, Prince Henry of Prussia, arrived in Vienna, and was met at the station by the Emperor Francis Joseph and a numerous suite.

Dr. Holub tells me that in his opinion, and there could certainly not be a more competent one, the rising on the East Coast of Africa is a widely-organised rebellion, and he fears that the lives of Europeans residing inland are in danger, as Mohammedan fanaticism makes no distinction between English and Germans. Dr. Holub is fully persuaded that the rebellion has been promoted by emissaries from Khartoum, and would not be surprised if there were to be an insurrection against the Sultan of Zanzibar, who is disliked by his people for assisting European Powers in their work of colonisation and of the abolition of the slave trade.

The appointment of Count Deym to succeed Count Karolyi as Austrian Ambassador in London, though not yet final, is regarded as certain. Count Deym, who has been Chargé d'Affaires at Munich, was one of the most popular members of the Munich Diplomatic Corps. All his colleagues, as well as the Bavarian Court, are distressed to lose him and his accomplished and amiable wife. The appointment will be excellent in every respect.

The Emperor of Austria will leave Vienna at the end of this month for Gödöllö, where he will stay for some weeks and will be joined by the Empress on her return from Corfu in the middle of November.

There has been another interesting début at the Vienna Court opera. The tenor, Van Dyck, who was to have come out as Lohengrin in Paris, and who has since sung "Parsifal" at Beyreuth, appeared before the Vienna public last week in the part of Wagner's ideal hero. M. Van Dyck is a Belgian, and has only lately learnt German. Nevertheless his success was complete. The hypercritical dilettanti of Vienna were not only thoroughly satisfied, but pronounced the new tenor to be the best Lohengrin that has been heard at the Court opera for many years. His voice is fresh and admirably trained after the French school. His interpretation of both the dramatic and lyric passages of Lohengrin were outside the routine of the German stage and more in conformity than the latter with the original conception of the composer.

SIR MORELL MACKENZIE'S BOOK.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

BERLIN, Oct. 21.

The order for the confiscation of Sir Morell Mackenzie's book on the Emperor Frederick will, for the present, not be abrogated. The Duisburg tribunal considers the suspicion that certain passages in the work constitute an act of lèse-majesté to be well founded. The law and police administration here are alleged to have examined the book a fortnight ago, and to have found no cause for prohibiting its publication.

SUGAR BOUNTIES CONVENTION

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

Berlin, Oct. 21.—A meeting of beetroot sugar manufacturers in the province of Saxony, the principal seat of the sugar industry in Germany, yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution declaring that the London Sugar Bounties Convention was incompatible with the German manufacturing interests, since the introduction of a tax on the manufactured article was calculated to injury the best industry.

THE RUSSIAN GRAND DUKES.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

Cairo, Oct. 21.—Madame Koiander, the wife of the Russian Diplomatic Agent, gave a water fête on a dahabiyeh to-night in honour of the Grand Dukes Paul and Sergius and the Grand Duchess Sergius. The fête proved a great success, the Khedive, the Egyptian Ministers, the Consuls-General, and many other notables being present. In the course of the evening the Grand Duchess Sergius gave a reception to the ladies.

POLITICAL TURBULENCE IN SPAIN.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]

Madrid, Oct. 20.—Señor Canovas del Castillo, with several members of the Conservative party, were the objects of a hostile demonstration on the part of a number of persons at Saragossa last night, on the arrival of the ex-Premier and his friends at that city. The party were greeted with derisive cries and songs, and stones were thrown at the windows of Señor Canovas del Castillo's residence. On the arrival, however, of a detachment of police and men of the Civil Guard, the people dispersed quietly, and order was restored. The latest telegrams state that the majority of the inhabitants of Saragossa condemn the demonstration.

The Spanish press of all parties condemns the hostile demonstrations which were made against Señor Canovas del Castillo, at Saragossa, last night, and the Conservative newspapers publish a vigorous protest against the treatment which he and his friends met with. Telegrams received from Saragossa this evening report that all is quiet there to-day. The ex-Premier will be present at a Conservative banquet to-night, and the authorities have taken precautions to prevent a recurrence of yesterday's disturbances.

Hostilities in the Soudan.—The International Arbitration and Peace Association recently adopted a resolution and forwarded a copy to the Foreign Office, calling the attention of her Majesty's Government to a letter written by Mr. F. W. Fox in reference to the renewed hostilities at Suakin. The secretary has received the following reply from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the Foreign Office, Oct. 15: "I am directed by the Marquis of Salisbury to acknowledge the receipt of your letter calling attention, on behalf of your association, to the renewal of hostilities near Suakin, and requesting information as to the policy of her Majesty's Government in the Eastern Soudan. In reply I am to state that since the date of Mr. Fox's letter of August, 1887, to which you refer, trade with the Eastern Soudan has been thrown open, and is now practically unrestricted, except as regards contraband of war. I am to add that the policy followed by her Majesty's Government has been to stand purely on the defensive against any hostile movement or combination of the Arab tribes, avoiding any cause of action which might involve the ultimate necessity of offensive action, but encouraging legitimate trade by every means in their power."

The Tottenham Tragedy.—On Saturday evening Dr. Macdonald, the coroner for the North-east Division of Middlesex, held an inquiry at Tottenham into the circumstances attending the death of Henry Elliott, aged sixty-four, a painter, who committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver, after attempting to murder his brother-in-law, Thomas Morris, while walking together in Mount Pleasant-fields, Tottenham, on Wednesday afternoon last. The jury returned a verdict of suicide while temporarily insane. Morris is progressing favourably, and hopes are entertained of his ultimate recovery.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

SYDNEY, Oct. 20.

Sir Henry Parkes addressed a large meeting of his constituents on the 18th inst. The Premier stated that the Ministry had succeeded in reducing the annual expenditure of Government by £1,000,000, and their future policy would be to further remodel taxation in the direction of Free Trade, and also to readjust its burdens in accordance with the ability of the taxpayers to bear them and the benefits received by the people. Works for the conservation of water in the interior and the establishment of irrigation farms would be pressed forward. Proceeding to dwell upon the necessity and wisdom of effective defence works, the speaker then referred to the question of Australian federation. He said that it would be best to do the fullest justice to their resources, so as to be prepared to take the highest ground when the time was ripe for union. The Premier maintained that the Imperial Constitution must be recast to be permanent, and concluded as follows: "In uniting the outlying colonies to the mother country England must present an object for love and loyalty and for the young passion for national authority in Australia which would be more attractive than any elsewhere to be found within the wide circle of the family of nations."

The Premier's speech was received with enthusiastic applause.

Parliament will reassemble on the 23rd inst.

THE CZAR AT BAKU.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

St. Petersburg, Oct. 21.—The Czar and Czarina, and the other members of the Imperial family, arrived at Baku at noon yesterday, and met with an enthusiastic reception. Among the numerous deputations who came to greet his Majesty, the one that attracted most attention was a deputation from the Turcoman tribes of the Transcaspian province, which included the widow and two sons of the former Khan of Merv. It was the Khan's wife who, in 1884, persuaded her tribe to submit to Russia. The Turcomans, after handing their Majesties bread and salt on a richly-wrought salver, presented the Czarina with carpets and other stuffs worked by the Tekke women, while to the Czarewitch they gave a sword studded with jewels. In the afternoon the Imperial party were present at the ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of a new Orthodox Cathedral at Baku. The Czar and Czarina also intend to visit the Nobel and other naphtha works for which Baku is famous.

CHILDREN IN PRISON.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Sir—Most cordially do I agree with, and most sincerely do I thank you for, your article of to-day on this subject. As a prison chaplain of nearly twelve years' standing I claim to speak with some authority on the point, and I say unhesitatingly that if a society for the manufacture of criminals were set on foot that society could in no better way further its ends than by pressing for the imprisonment of every little boy and girl who could, on any decent pretext, be brought before a bench of magistrates. Prison officials well know the hardening influence of gaol life on the young, and statistics show how unlikely it is that the first term of imprisonment will be the last in the case of children of tender years. They learn the secret which should jealously be kept from them—that a short imprisonment is, after all, no such very terrible punishment.

For some years I have written, spoken, lectured, pleaded on this subject. The reply made is, "What are we to do?" I answer:

1. In the case of boys and girls alike use freely the power of committal to industrial schools.
2. Also, in the case of boys, do not be afraid of corporal punishment, administered with that severity which is true mercy and true wisdom.
3. Let magistrates study and act upon that most beneficent measure, the "First Offender's Act," which became law in August, 1887. Very many, I find, are unaware of its provisions, and of the powers which it entrusts to the Bench.

I shall not further, Sir, trespass on your space, but I beg to assure you that you have hit upon a social evil which can scarcely be exaggerated. Public opinion is in a torpid and lethargic state in respect of it, and by stirring that opinion into activity you will be rendering an immeasurable service to the community.—Your obedient servant,

CHARLES GOLDNEY, Chaplain of H.M. Prison, Stafford.

Lord Hartington's Visit to Belfast.—After spending the morning at Craigavad, the residence of Sir Edward Porter Cowan, the Marquis of Hartington took his departure from Belfast on Saturday afternoon, en route for London. As he drove through the main streets to the Northern Counties Railway Terminus, the leader of the Unionist party met with cordial greetings from large crowds. Just before the departure of the train his lordship was induced to say a few words from the window of the saloon railway carriage. After thanking the people for the kindness of the reception accorded him, which he believed evinced their attachment to the cause he had at heart, the noble lord added: I regret that the time at our disposal has not been sufficient to enable us to see more of the prosperity which has grown up under Imperial rule in Belfast—(hear, hear)—but no one could even pass through the streets of Belfast—through the streets of your city without seeing that it is not behind any city within the limits of the United Empire in its prosperity and greatness. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, I am sure that we shall all go back encouraged and strengthened in any feeble efforts which we may have to make in the cause of the Union. (Cheers.) At Stranraer Lord Hartington also met with manifestations of popular respect.

THE PARNELL COMMISSION.

Several of the Irish Nationalist members of the House of Commons have already arrived in London, for the purpose of attending the Special Commission, the second sitting of which will be held to-day in the principal Probate Court at the Royal Courts of Justice. The Commissioners, it will be remembered, are the Right Hon. Sir James Hannen, the Hon. Sir John Charles Day, and the Hon. Sir Archibald Levin Smith, and the duty imposed on them by the Act of Parliament is to "inquire and report upon the charges and allegations made against certain members of Parliament and other persons in the course of the proceedings in an action entitled 'O'Donnell versus Walter and another.'" In the action referred to the Attorney-General, as counsel for the Times newspaper, endeavoured to show that there had been direct and intimate relationship between members of the Parnellite Parliamentary party and other leaders of the Land and National Leagues on the one hand and the organisers and perpetrators of crime and outrage on the other. It is to test the grounds of this allegation that the Special Commission has been appointed, and the Attorney-General will now have the opportunity, which was denied him at the trial of the O'Donnell libel suit, of putting into the box and examining on oath such witnesses as he may think fit to bring forward in support of the grave charges made by him as the mouthpiece of his clients. The learned gentleman will have the assistance of Sir Henry James, Q.C., and other well-known barristers; whilst the Parnellite members, who may be said to be in the position of defendants, have secured a strong array of counsel led by Sir Charles Russell, Q.C. It is understood that on the opening of the Court, at eleven o'clock this morning, some preliminary applications will be made, and that as soon as these have been disposed of the Attorney-General will make a statement embodying the accusations of the Times, and foreshadowing the evidence by which he proposes, if possible, to sustain them. The evidence which will doubtless be looked forward to with the deepest interest will be that in reference to the letters attributed by the Times to Mr. Parnell, and denounced by that gentleman as forgeries. Anticipations are entertained that Sir Richard Webster's clients will be compelled to disclose the means by which the letters came into their possession. The Commissioners, it is believed, will sit four or five days a week, but the probable duration of the inquiry is as yet uncertain.

It is understood that one of the preliminary applications to be made to the Commissioners to-day will be in reference to Mr. William Redmond, M.P., now a prisoner under the Crimes Act, and whose release is desired on the ground that, being one of the persons scheduled by the Times, it is important he should be free to attend the inquiry. The application is made under a section of the Act which provides that "where it shall appear to the Commissioners that any person affected by any of the said charges or allegations is at any time during the holding of the said inquiry detained or imprisoned the Commissioners may order the attendance of such person at such inquiry, in such manner, for such time, and subject to such conditions as regards bail or otherwise, as to the Commissioners may seem fit." At their first meeting the Commissioners promised to make an order under this section for the release of Mr. John Dillon, M.P., but such a step was almost immediately rendered unnecessary by the unconditional release of Mr. Dillon by direction of the Irish Executive on account of ill-health.

The Commissioners, it may be mentioned, have full powers to enforce the attendance of witnesses, by arrest if necessary; to compel the production of documents; to punish persons guilty of contempt; and to issue a commission or request to examine witnesses abroad. It is said that Mr. Parnell's counsel will repeat the application, which they unsuccessfully made last month, for the issue of a commission to take the evidence in New York of Mr. Patrick Egan, formerly treasurer of the Irish Land League.

Certificates of indemnity will be granted to witnesses who, in the opinion of the Commissioners, make full and true disclosure touching all the matters in respect of which they are examined, and the possession of such certificates will protect them from any civil or criminal proceedings that may at any time be instituted against them in respect of any matter touching which they may have been so examined.

PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR IN MANCHESTER.

On Saturday his Royal Highness Prince Albert Victor of Wales fulfilled a round of public engagements in Manchester. During Friday night and until his departure from the city on Saturday evening, he was the guest of the Corporation, occupying the State apartments at the Town Hall. On Saturday he received the Corporation's address, which was presented in the Council Chamber at the Town Hall. There was a large attendance of prominent citizens, including the Mayor, Lord Egerton of Tatton, Sir James Fergusson, M.P., the Bishop of Manchester, the Bishop of Salford, Dr. Greenwood, principal of Owen's College, and others.

The address was read by the Recorder, Mr. H. W. West, Q.C.

Prince Albert Victor, in reply, said: Sir J. J. Harwood and gentlemen—I beg to return to you, and to the citizens of Manchester, my sincere thanks for the loyal and cordial welcome that you have extended to me. It is a source of great pleasure to me that my visit to this town to-day is for the purpose of furthering the interests of institutions which aim at the moral and material improvement of the people, and which cannot fail to be a blessing to the inhabitants of this city. I esteem it a high privilege to have the opportunity of showing the deep sympathy I have with works of this nature. I again thank you for the kind sentiments that you have expressed regarding my parents and myself, and I shall not fail to convey to her Majesty the loyal terms in which you have alluded to her. (Cheers.)

Shortly afterwards the Prince was entertained at luncheon in the large hall. The Mayor (Sir J. J. Harwood) proposed the health of her Majesty the Queen, and subsequently that of the Prince and Princess of Wales and the other members of the Royal family.

Prince Albert Victor in responding said he could not thank the Mayor sufficiently for the very flattering terms in which he had referred to the visit of his parents, who, he knew, were greatly gratified by their reception. He (the Prince) felt much satisfaction that he had been invited to Manchester to perform three extremely interesting and, he hoped, beneficial works for the people of the city. He looked forward to these functions with pleasure, and trusted that the works now about to be begun might continue satisfactorily and be a benefit to the community at large. (Cheers.)

The Prince then proposed the health of the Mayor, and Sir John having replied the proceedings terminated.

At half-past one o'clock a procession, including the members of the Corporation and an escort of the 9th Lancers, left the Town Hall for Birch Fields, Rusholme, a public recreation ground, which was to be opened by the Prince. The streets en route were thickly lined with people, who gave his Royal Highness a cordial welcome, and there was a profuse display of bunting. His Royal Highness was presented with a gold key, and having unlocked the gate he declared the ground open, amid loud cheers. The party then drove to the Ancoats Hospital, which is situated in the midst of a working-class population, and where the greeting given to the Royal visitor was exceedingly hearty. The Prince was presented with an address, and also with a silver trowel, with which he laid the foundation stone of the "Albert Victor wing" of the hospital.

Before doing so he said: I thank you for the honour you have done me in inviting me to lay the foundation stone of the new wing of this hospital, and it affords me great satisfaction to know that my visit to Manchester to-day has in part for its object the performance of this duty. I fully realise the great advantages that will result from the enlargement and development of this institution in the alleviation of pain and suffering amongst the working population of this most important city, and I feel sure the work now commenced will be carried through by the citizens of Manchester to a successful termination. (Cheers.) I thank you for the kind terms in which you have spoken of me, and for the loyal and dutiful sentiments you have expressed towards her Majesty's throne and person; and I shall ever bear in mind the kindly welcome I have received from the inhabitants of this city. (Cheers.)

His Royal Highness then laid the stone, and afterwards visited the Lads' Club in Livesey-street, an institution for working lads, in the conduct of which the committee are helped by voluntary workers from the Grammar School. The young members of the club, of whom there are over 1,000, gave the Royal visitor a boisterous welcome, and his Royal Highness, after inspecting the premises—which were formerly used as a police barracks—and declaring the building open, expressed great interest in the working of the institution, and heartily wished it a successful career. The Prince then drove through crowded streets to the Town Hall, and, after a short stay there, to the Central Station, whence he travelled by special train to Knutsford on a visit to Lord and Lady Egerton at Tatton Hall.

Yesterday morning he attended service at Rostherne parish church, accompanied by Lord Egerton of Tatton. There were very few visitors present. His Royal Highness leaves Tatton Hall for York on Wednesday afternoon.

At Grimsby yesterday there was a Thanksgiving service for the cessation of small-pox in the borough. The hospital for the district was closed about a month ago.
